THE BIG STEEL companies talk of abandoning the NRA code altogether, fearing the consequences of putting their industry absolutely in the control of organized labor.

"More easily said than done," they will be told. An old horse mired in a swamp might talk about "abandoning the leeches that cling to him," but the leeches would cling. American industry must go all the way through the process of being managed by those that never successfully managed anything else before. Maybe the experiment will lead to the millennium, maybe not. All must hope and co-operate, even the mired horse.

MR. GREEN, head of the American Federation of Labor, urges unions to drive "the Reds" from their ranks by expelling all Communist members. Mr. Green demands that labor "make war upon Communism." That will please some frightened "best minds."

Perhaps Mr. Green will add a demand that racketeering methods be also driven from some unions. He can learn from business men how welcome that move would be. It would, however, reduce the earnings of some important "leaders."

ONE ITEM in the day's news will be news forever, or as long as men live here. Dr. R. F. Sanford, California scientist, of Pasadena, has discovered and can prove that the earth has a fourth important motion, added to the three with which you are familiar; the first, turning every 24 hours on its axis; the second, traveling around the sun, once in 365 days, in an eclipse; the third, traveling with the sun, on its mysterious journey through space, toward the constellation of Lyra. That third motion, like that of a calf walking around its mother, as the mother walks across the pasture, is a spiral motion.

TO THE THREE principal and universally known motions, Dr. Sanford adds a fourth, caused by the sun swinging in a great circle around the center of our galaxy, or "Milky Way." In that fourth great movement, the earth, compelled to accompany the sun wherever it goes, swings through space at a speed one hundred and fifty miles per second. The earth turns on its axis about one thousand miles an hour, travels around the sun about nineteen miles a second, or 68,400 miles an hour. The sun drags us through space, foward Lyra, at twelve miles a second. The "big swing" around the central point of our galactic system is made at a speed of 540,000 miles an hour.

EVEN THAT is not all. The earth has all sorts of queer little motions of its own and it has a fifth principal motion, traveling with our sun, and the millions of other suns in the Milky Way, as our little "universe" travels around some distant unknown central point in space.

We know that the nebulae, or "outside island universes," in space are all in motion—astronomers actually see them moving—and, of course, our star-city, called the "galaxy," moves, as do the other nebulae. Nothing stands still in the universe.

IT IS PLEASING to know that Mount Wilson Observatory makes its sidereal calculations of speed and motion "with the aid of 146 cool red stars, scattered about the sun at distances which average about 2,000 light years (or 12,000,000,000,000,000 miles).

It's a big universe, and in it 2,000 light years or 12 quadrillions of miles represent a small distance. There are nebulae distant one billion light years from our planet. You can figure that in miles, multiplying by 186,000 the number of seconds in one thousand million years.

Anyone not interested in these fourth and fifth motions of the earth and the size of the universe should join Plato's men, sitting in his famous cave, facing the wall, their backs to the light.

LLOYD GEORGE, in his memoirs, says that while England was borrowing American dollars so industriously, the "United States, shocked by the cost of war, was suspicious, as the Allies asked for credit."

He does not add, as he might, that Americans would have been wise to refuse the credit, since all of "our gallant allies"

MR. AND MRS. JERRY JARNEGIN . . . SHE'S IRENE FRANKLIN

The latest picture of Mr. Jarnegin, the music composer, shown with his wife, the musical comedy star, just a few days ago in their court case against a former houseboy. Today he is dead, victim of a gun found near his body. Police aren't sure that it's a case of suicide. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

HOLLYWOOD MUSICIAN SLAIN

Jerry Jarnegin Found Mysteriously Dead During Party

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—Death—murder or suicide—struck down Jerry Jarnegin, famed composer and pianist, and husband of Irene Franklin, the musical comedy star, in the midst of a gay dinner party at his fashionable Toluca Lake mansion last night.

With the bizarre contrast of a motion picture mystery melodrama, the noted concert artist was shot and killed, while within sound of the report—a scant 12 feet away across a flower-decorated patio—Miss Franklin and three guests laughed and joked in a pre-nuptial feast.

Detectives studied two theories—murder or suicide. Bert H. J. Wallis, captain of detectives, said:

"We are not at all satisfied with any theory of suicide."

Police said that while Miss Franklin and her guests joked at a pre-nuptial feast for Jarnegin's niece, Miss Dorothy Watson, Jarnegin excused himself, saying:

CALLED BY WIFE

When he failed to return in a few minutes Miss Franklin called:

"Hurry up, Jerry dear, everything is getting cold."

Meanwhile Miss Franklin and the guests, Miss Watson, her fiance, William Green, of Lake Charleston, La., and Mrs. Wally Klein, had heard a muffled shot but had failed to realize its import.

Investigating the tragedy detectives learned that Miss Franklin went into the living room to ask Jarnegin to hasten back to the feast.

She screamed. Her husband's body was slumped in a chair. The three startled guests rushed to her and they found Jarnegin dead—a bullet wound just below the right ear. Police were called. They discovered the death weapon in the seat of a chair six feet from the chair in which Jarnegin's body was found.

DEATH WEAPON

Miss Franklin said the death pistol had been placed under a pillow in their bedroom. Officers found the bed unruffled. Miss Franklin sobbed:

"Had Jerry done this thing himself I know he would not have stoped to smooth the bed after he had obtained the pistol."

The door and screen door of their bedroom were open. The actress said:

"We always kept them both locked, and I'm sure they were that way before we started dinner."

Officers also found evidence that cubboard in a hallway had been ransacked and said it was possible someone had searched it hurriedly or might even have been concealed in it.

Creen Quits Butterfly Bride

And that's just one of the five sensational developments in the runaway marriage of the pretty blonde and her truck-driving husband.

They were made in a little note, a terse cablegram, a Manila wire story and a telephone talk.

Just four days after his 4 a. m. elopement, Creen has decided to call it "quits"—just three days after his bride reached the same decision.

He wrote a goodby note to his 16-year-old impetuous wife which he wants in the paper where she can see it. It reads:

"I'm through with love and butterflies and elopements."

Creen, after writing the note yesterday, declared:

"She can't make a fool out of me. I'm not going to mail it to her. She can read it in the paper."

'JUST A BUTTERFLY'

Colette no doubt will read his words at the Florence Brunner farm, near Grove City, Pa., where she has been since her hasty marriage trip to Wellsburg, W. Va.

Tommy, who is 22 and lives at 1008 Ridge avenue, North Side, added these parting words for the daughter of the well-to-do Mt. Lebanon oil executive:

"Anybody can see she's just a rich butterfly."

"I was never in love with the girl. I got married in a daze. It was her that suggested getting married. And she can't even boil water.

"I wouldn't give her 20 cents, she's not going to get the automobile I bought her for a wedding present and I'm the one

Thousands Attending 36th National Encampment

The Boys of '98 on the march from Maine to California, took Pittsburgh today like Maj. Gen. Pitthugh Lee took Morro Castle.

It was their thirty-sixth national encampment and they literally swarmed over the city in seething thousands.

The Nixon Theater, convention hall for the five-day meeting, was packed to the rafters for the opening session this morning. William Penn Hotel headquarters was swamped with milling delegates arriving by the droves with each tick of the clock.

It was a gala event and the city was gaily decked for the occasion, sidewalks and buildings, festooned in bunting, heralded the city's welcome to the khaki and blue-clad veterans.

REVEILLE SOUNDS

Reveille was sounded by veteran trumpeters, traveling about the downtown section in loud-speaker wagons at 6 a. m. The opening session in the Nixon Theater got under way at 9 o'clock with a band concert.

With Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief Robert S. Cain acting as chairman, the session was called to order at 9:30 and invocation was pronounced by Chaplain-in-Chief Francis V. R. Moore.

Greetings were extended by Mayor William N. McNair in his own inimitable manner and in a more serious manner by County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, County Controller Robert O. Woodside, Thomas Kirby and United States Senator James J. Davis, who substituted for Ben Prager, national adjutant, Army and Navy Legion of Valor.

RESPOND TO GREETINGS

Response to the greetings was given by Commander-in-Chief William H. Armstrong on behalf of the veterans, and Mrs. Mamie B. Schmidt, national auxiliary president.

Flags were presented to both Mayor McNair and Commissioner McGovern and in ceremonials scheduled for the noon hour, the flags were unfurled in the offices of the city and county executives. Uniformed women of the national president's escort were to participate in the ceremonies.

Mrs. Margaret Mackey, president of the Allegheny County Council Auxiliaries, presented the flag to McGovern, and Anna

POLICE SPIES SCORED BY MAYOR

Threatens to Slash Force in Half In Feud

Mayor McNair, strolling through life in his own inimitable way, today attracted attention with three protests.

1—When he learned that his police force was maintaining a 24-hour watch on the apartment of Mae (Billie) Schible, the Oakland landlady, he described the guard as "persecution" and threatened to cut the force in half.

2—His second special meeting of Council failed for lack of a quorum, and the Mayor announced he was "washing his hands of the Law Department emergency."

3—He virtually abolished Morals Court by ordering most of its cases sent to other police courts, a move immediately denounced by welfare heads.

4—Defied by Councilman John J. Kane, he failed to send a police patrol after him, and instead took a ride in one himself.

Red-headed Mae (Billie) Schible's Oakland apartment is being watched day and night by the police and Mayor McNair would like to know why.

In fact this "gross waste of police power" as he termed it, is one of the reasons he said he is going to try to have Pittsburgh's police force cut in half.

His Honor said he is going to ask Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, his unofficial budget adviser, today to make this great police cut at once. He gave as his reason:

"We don't have any criminals in our city. The whole reason they are watching "Billie" is because they don't have anything else to do.

"Using all those policemen to watch her is like the espionage system they have in Russia. It looks like persecution."

"Billie," too, thinks its persecution—and terrible.

GUNMEN SLAY BABY 'TARGET'

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Shot in the head as he sat with his baby brother in a little red wagon, 2½-year-old Robert Pitts, Jr., died today in the South Chicago Hospital. A bullet had interrupted his happy command of "giddap, horsies," given to his parents.

The shot was fired by one of four men riding in a sedan. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitts, Sr., were imitating a team of horses for their children. As they drew the wagon down the sidewalk on stony Island avenue, near Ninetieth street, a shot rang out. Pitts said:

"Then Robert gave a little cry. We looked around and there he was, toppled out of the wagon, a bullet hole in his head."

Pitts said the sedan sped south for a few blocks and disappeared around a corner.

The baby was rushed to the hospital, but despite an emergency operation, continued to sink. He died this morning.

The father, a janitor, asserted that he had no enemies and that he did not think the killer was aiming at him.

Crowds See Bears In Death Fight at Zoo

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Six black bears at the St. Louis zoo turned on their pitmate, "Brownie," and killed her as several hundred Sunday visitors crowded to the railing of the new barless enclosure to watch the fierce but one-sided fight. Small and more docile than her companions, "Brownie" never had a chance.

Director George Vierheller surmised that someone tossed a morsel of food into the pit. Irked by the heat and unwilling to wait for feeding time, the bears tried to get the food away from "Brownie," who was slapped down and set upon by the six.

Hiccoughs 35 Days; Fear for Girl's Life

ANDERSON, Ind., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Physicians were endeavoring today to stop sporadic periods of hiccoughing with which Miss Grace Clark, 25, of this city, has suffered or 35 days.

Dies in 20-Ft. Fall As Scaffold Breaks

William Roalman, 28, carpenter, 4910 Penn avenue, fell 20 feet to his death today when he lost his balance while working on a scaffold at 5110 Baum boulevard, police reported.

DESERTS BODY OF FATHER

LATROBE, Pa., Aug. 20.—The Latrobe Hospital today was prepared to turn over to the Westmoreland County coroner the body of Guy Eldred, 65, left at the hospital by a son with the explanation that he had no money for the burial.

The son, James, of R. D. No. 4, Saegerstown, was driving home from Florida with his father when the latter was killed.

During a rainstorm the father left the rumble seat of the machine to get into the front seat. While in the roadway he was struck by another machine.

He was rushed to the hospital and there pronounced dead.

According to State Highway Patrolman C. E. Gunnerson, of Greensburg, and hospital authorities, the son then said he did not have enough money to bury his father, got into his automobile and drove away.

10 Planes Complete Alaska Round Trip

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Ten army bombing planes, comprising the Alaska flight squadron, landed at Bolling Field today, completing their 10,000-mile round trip to the North.

Secretary Dern told Lieut. Col. H. H. Arnold, flight commander, he had "forged a new link between Alaska and the people of the United States."

Town Goes Dark In Utility Clash

SHENANDOAH, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Street lights in Shenandoah were shut off at dawn today, and borough officials said they were informed there would be no lights tonight.

Difficulties between the borough and the Pennsylvania Light and Power Company over the municipal light bill is given as the reason for the action.

SPIDER, SNAKE IN DEATH DUEL

BALTIMORE, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A tiny, shiny black spider pitted its cunning against a foot-long garter snake, a traditional enemy, in the cellar of a Baltimore home and appeared today to be winning the life and death conflict.

Horace P. Lane, Jr., reported the death duel began in his cellar three days ago when the snake intending to make short work of the spider was caught in its web.

Lane said the snake, worn by 72 hours of struggling to release itself, seemed to be growing weaker.

The little spider, described as "no bigger than an eye of the snake," meanwhile sits back in his web and patiently waits. At times repairs are made to rents torn by the captive in the web.

The web—the battle scene—hangs between a spigot and an iron boiler near the cellar floor.

Grand Jury to Get Bartholomew Case

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 20.—The case of George Bartholomew, Washington and Jefferson College wrestling coach, charged with the slaying of George Thomas Manis, 23-year-old female impersonator, will be given to the grand jury this week.

The District Attorney's office announced that the grand jury probably will take up Bartholomew's case Friday. Meanwhile, attorneys were completing plans for Bartholomew's defense when he goes on trial.

Roosevelt Back From 2-Day Cruise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt returned to the White House at 9:30 a. m. today, refreshed from a two-day trip on the Potomac River aboard the yacht Sequoia.

Mr. Roosevelt and his guests, who included former Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley, left late Saturday, intending to return yesterday, but Mr. Roosevelt changed his plans and remained above the yacht overnight.

Fail ti Find Will Of Artist John Kane

John Kane, the artist, apparently left no will. This was indicated today when his daughter, Mrs. Margaret Kane Corbett, applied for letters of administration on his estate and filed a bond of $8,000, showing that the artist left personal property valued at $4,000.

If no will is found, one-third of Kane's estate will go to his widow and one-third each to his daughters, Mrs. Corbett and Mrs. Mary Kane Edwards.

FLAY POLITICS IN HOME LOANS

Criticism of Pennsylvania political leaders and praise of Ewing Laporte, new state manager of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, came from Washington today.

A spokesman for the HOLC in the capital blamed the inefficiency of the Pennsylvania offices on "shortsightedness" of political leaders in their choice of appointees for the jobs. Political influence was extended even to putting stenographers on the payroll, it was said.

Meanwhile, Laporte announced the appointment of E. R. Cherry as manager for the Johnstown district HOLC to succeed L. G. Lichliter.

The HOLC in Pittsburgh has been criticized, even by Attorney Laporte, for delay in failing to aid some 20,000 needy home owners and 15 closed banks in this district. Today, this praise was bestowed on Laporte in Washington:

"He's doing a fine, impartial job and when he completes what he has in mind there'll be no cause to complain of the HOLC in Pennsylvania."

Resort Hotel Ablaze In White Mountains

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Fire today swept the Pemigewasset House, a 100-room wooden structure, the largest summer hotel in Plymouth, White Mountain resort. Although the hotel was filled to capacity, virtually all guests had breakfasted and none was believed trapped.

Nab Football Star On Fraud Charge

Accused of impersonating a federal agent, Jack Carson, 26, former half back on Georgia Tech's football team, was held for court on $2,000 bond today when arraigned before a United States commissioner.

Carson was accused of representing himself as a government agent in order to obtain credit at a downtown store. After obtaining the credit, store officials said, he failed to make payment. He was arrested at 5710 Kippey street.

MacDonald Visits Among Eskimos

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—In an isolated missionary outpost just south of Labrador, J. Ramsay MacDonald, Britain's prime minister, is obtaining first hand knowledge of the work of doctors, nurses and teachers who minister to the Eskimos and white people of the northland.

He and his daughter, Ishbel, have been guests of Sir Wilfred Grenfell and Lady Grenfell for several days now at St. Anthony.

U. S. Ships Capone to Island Fortress

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Al Capone, America's public enemy No. 1 long before the world had ever heard of John Dillinger, is on his way to a new prison home.

He is being transferred, with great secrecy, from Atlanta Penitentiary to the new Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay — the prison federal authorities call "impregnable."

With 42 other prisoners, Capone was whisked out of the penitentiary in Atlanta early Sunday. Guarded by federal agents carrying automatic shotguns, the prisoners were placed in two screened and barred railroad cars and started on their way to Alcatraz—the island prison fortress designed for convicts considered too dangerous to be kept in ordinary prisons.

Federal authorities maintained a tight-lipped silence about reports the former Chicago gang leader was being sent to the Pacific Coast prison.

When the cars were stopped for a change of trains, a prisoner who strongly resembled Capone just grinned when someone called:

"Is that you, Al?"

While the cars waited to be ferried across the Mississippi the guards kept the curious at a distance but newspapermen got within hailing distance, one calling:

"Is Al Capone in there?"

One prisoner nodded and yelled back:

"In this car, by the sixth window."

The occupant of window No. 6 looked like the ex-gang lord. He

Nude Parties Aired in Court As Girl Defendants Blush

Nudist parties in a Squirrel Hill apartment were described before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Morals Court today while three girls sat by blushing.

After listening to the eloquent description by Lieut. Michael O'Connor, who raided the flat at 5630 Hobart street, Magistrate McGowan fined Mona Getty, 28, $50 as keeper of a disorderly house and fined Mary Porter, 22, and June Gale, 21, each $25.

Three men arrested with the girls forfeited bonds of $15 each when they failed to appear at the hearing.

Lieut. O'Connor said he had had the apartment under close watch for some time because of complaints, but still was somewhat surprised early today when his knocks on the door was answered by a nude woman, who bade him enter. He did, but turned his face to the wall while he waited for the culprits to assume proper attire.

GERMAN PLEBISCITE MAKES HITLER DICTATOR FOR LIFE TERM

ONLY 5,000,000 VOTE AGAINST NAZI 'BOSS'

38,000,000 Approve His Assumption Of Power

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—Adolf Hitler today entered upon a lifetime job as Germany's Chancellor. Over 38,000,000 Germans — largely or unwillingly, freely or not, told him:

"Yes, we want you to be our autocrat from now on."

Fewer than 5,000,000 took a chance and voted no. Hitler has a permanent commission from the German people.

German democracy which committed suicide when Hitler moved into the chancellor's office in January, 1933, has now buried itself. The corpse will not be resurrected during Hitler's life. Each year Hitler has promised to submit his policies to plebiscite but never again will he submit his person to popular approval and nothing can be foreseen now that could happen to break his iron hold on power except death or war.

VOTE ON ACCOMPLISHED FACT

The last plebiscite in November, 1933, asking the people to pass judgment on Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations, was on a question of policy. Yesterday's plebiscite asked the people to approve of Hitler's personal leadership—his succession to Hindenburg as president.

Both plebiscites presented the people with an accomplished fact and all they could do was to say, "We agree," or "We don't," but not with the faintest chance of changing facts.

Today, however, the most striking features of yesterday's plebiscite were: First, Hitler received more than 2,300,000 fewer votes than last November; second, that the government permitted the result to be published.

Now it will be impossible to assert that Hitler's popularity is greater than ever, but now the government can challenge anybody who asserts the election was not free and the count was not honest.

Final figures show Hitler yesterday got 88 per cent of the votes cast or 90 per cent of the valid votes against 95 per cent last year. Out of a total of 45,878,000 voters eligible yesterday he received but 83 per cent, and if all the invalid votes plus the good votes were counted against Hitler, they, together with the uncast votes, would amount to 17 per cent.

But Hitler's loss of 2,000,000 odd votes is regarded by the government as of no account against the overwhelming fact that he still got his commission from around 90 per cent of the population.

Hitler Takes Vacation To Celebrate 'Election'

By TOM WILHELM
International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 20.—Flushed with his latest victory at the polls—a triumph marred by the fact that one in every 10 Germans voted against him—Adolf Hitler left Berlin for his Bavarian Mountain retreat today. The leader-chancellor signalized his achievement by notice to the world that he will not be satisfied until Germany regains all that she has lost. He said:

"Everything German in the world belongs to Germany, and we must, as well as possible under the existing treaties, seek to win everything German back."

Hitler acknowledged a debt to his Nazi party in the following letter to his members, thanking them for their part in his poll victory:

"It was possible to win 90 per cent, and it will be possible to win the last 10 per cent. This will be the final coronation of our victory."

SIGNS ON CLIFF HELD NAZI SLUR

STAVANGER, Norway, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A one-man campaign against the anti-Nazi sign painters' art as practiced on the rocky promontorie sof the Norwegian coast threatened repercussions today.

The campaigner was the captain of the Hamburg-American liner Oceana, who stopped his ship off the coast leading to the port of Bergen and sent sailoors ashore to wash out inscriptions painted on the cliffs.

The inscriptions read:

"Down with Hitler!"

"Death to Nazism!"

The irate captain not only did his best to clean up the coast, but when his ship arrived at Bergen he stormed ashore and protested to the authorities.

Norwegian newspapers came forth with a rebuttal to his actions today with severe criticisms, referring to the captain's ordering the clean-up crew ashore as oobjectionable political censorship inside the territorial limit of Norway.

FIGHTS FOR SON OF ANTONIO

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Pasquale Cappello, brother of Mrs. Anna Antonio, who was executed for murder, today began a desperate fight to keep his guardianship over Frank, the 3-year-old son of the Antonios, whom he has reared for two years.

Cappello returned with the lad yesterday after a self-imposed three-day exile. It began when Mrs. Mary De Sisto, sister of Salvatore Antonio, the murdered father, sent representatives armed with a court order giving her custody of Frankie.

Police were restrained from taking any action against the uncle by an order obtained by Daniel H. Prior, Mrs. Antonio's lawyer.

Before she died she asked her brother to take care of the boy.

Prior's order will be argued in court September 28.

The $5,000 insurance for which Salvatore Antonio was slain has not been paid, but there have been reports it might be obtained by the three children.

Wedding Nears For Menjou And Verree

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—Adolphe Menjou today whispered

that his marriage to beautiful, statuesque Verree Teasdale will be next Saturday.

Menjou's divorce from Katherine Carver became final today.

Once the final divorce decree is in his possession, the best-dressed man in the movies was to go to the marriage license bureau here and file a notice to wed the young lady of his choice.

In the state of California it requires three days after a notice of intention is filed before a license is issued and the parties can be married.

According to Menjou, he and his bride-to-be will motor to Santa Barbara Saturday, where the ceremony will be held. They will continue their journey to Del Monte and other places north. Afterwards both will return to Hollywood — to their screen careers.

4 STARS DENY 'RED' LEANINGS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Four Hollywood film stars vigorously denied radical leanings today while District Attorney Neil McAllister pushed preparations for a drastic injunction making Communistic expressions or financial contributions punishable without trial.

One of the screen favorites may be specifically named in the injunction petition. He is James Cagney, filmland he-man, who protested he is "100 per cent American," has no sympathy for the Communist party, and has made no financial contributions to it.

Three Mexican movie stars—Lupe Velez, Ramon Novarro and Dolores Del Rio—were as vigorous in their denials of Communistic leanings when their names were drawn into radical investigations here.

They were involved only because their names were found written on a slip of paper in the apartment of Caroline Decker, secretary of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers' Union, Communist subsidiary. Authorities said Cagney's name was mentioned in letters written to Miss Decker.

She is a defendant in a current vagrancy trial in the state capital of 24 asserted Communists, and is one of 17 indicted for criminal syndicalism who the District Attorney said probably will go on trial this week.

Horse Race Chump Says He Took $1,500

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 20.—(INS.)—Because his conscience would give him no rest, Henry S. Dagg, 40, who described himself as a veteran Canadian government employe, today surrendered to police here and confessed to the embezzlement of $1,500 of dominion funds.

Money lenders, hounding him for a $700 debt, kept his telephone ringing and he was afraid his superiors would be told of the debt, Dagg said, adding:

"So I stole some government funds to play the horses, hoping to win enough to pay off the debt. Instead I lost."

WALLACE TOLD TO KEEP HANDS OFF SHIPS

Efforts of Secretary To Scuttle Merchant Marine Opposed

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A friendly suggestion to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to keep his mind on the land and not interfere with development of American Merchant Marine was made today by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Dem.), of Florida.

Upon leaving the White House following a call upon President Roosevelt in connection with a private matter, Senator Fletcher, commenting on Secretary Wallace's proposal to let foreign ships handle some of the American trade, said:

"It looks like our friend, Mr. Wallace, has been plowing into other fields. He had better stick to the land."

WALLACE'S STAND

And meanwhile national defense forces in Congress began organizing to combat efforts of Wallace to "plow under" the American Merchant Marine.

Wallace opposes continuation of government aid to United States shipping. He believes alien ships should deliver a large part of American exports on the theory that if you give foreigners money they will buy American products.

His views first were disclosed in a letter to Representative Schuyler O. Bland, of Virginia, Democratic chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, who believes shipping is as much entitled to protection against cheap foreign competition as is agriculture and industry.

TAKES UP FIGHT

Representative Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, ranking Republican on the House Naval Affairs Committee and its former chairman, was hastening here to take up the fight against abandoning aid for the ships under the Stars and Stripes as suggested by Wallace in his effort to expand foreign commerce. Britten has been vacationing at Montauk Point, L. I.

Through his office here he expressed "amazement" of Wallace's new policy toward the Merchant Marine. Britten, who holds that the Merchant Marine is necessary to national defense as an aid to our Army and Navy said:

"An adequate merchant marine is absolutely vital to national defense. Our shipbuilders and operators under the American flag cannot, in many instances, compete with foreign-flag ships heavily subsidized by foreign governments, unless our government gives financial aid.

"Secretary Wallace argues that it would be to our advantage if we let foreigners deliver a large share of our goods. He thinks that we can induce them to buy our products. He forgets we must have a strong Merchant Marine for national defense."

LANDLORDS GET RELIEF PLEA

George P. Mills, executive director of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, today appealed to property owners for their co-operation with the board's new plan of rent relief for the needy.

Mills said many property owners had declined to accept the state's offer of small monthly payments, and had evicted families receiving relief because the owners had "paying tenants in the offing." He said:

"One of the pressing needs of the rent relief division is a list of vacant properties available for occupancy by relief clients who do not have paying tenants in view."

Declaring that property owners had been "long suffering and have carried the burden of housing needy," Mills denied that landlords were balking at the new plan. It provides for payment in monthly amounts of taxes on the space occupied by relief families and a small additional amount sufficient to cover water rent and fire insurance.

RAINEY, DEAN OF HOUSE, DIES SUDDENLY

Heart Attack Kills Colorful Leader; Was Mellon Critic

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Henry T. Rainey, picturesque Speaker of the House of Representatives, is dead.

Apparently on the road to recovery from an attack of bronchial pneumonia, he suddenly developed angina pectoris last night and died at 7:50 p. m., as three physicians, hastily summoned, stood by, unable to aid him. Today would have been his seventy-fourth birthday.

The Speaker's unexpected passing brought expressions of deep sorrow from political leaders in all parts of the nation—from President Roosevelt on down.

LAUDED BY ROOSEVELT

The President called him "a humanitarian whose fine patriotism thought first of all of what he conceived to be the well being and interests of the common man."

Leadership of the next House is in doubt as a result of the death of Mr. Rainey, but Representative Joseph W. Byrns of Tennessee, who helped him put through the "must" legislation of President Roosevelt's program in the last Congress, is prominently mentioned as his successor.

The body will be cremated, in accordance with a wish Mrs. Rainey said her husband had often expressed.

Funeral arrangements probably will be completed today.

COLORFUL LEADER

Stocky, with flowing white hair and an ever-present flowing bow tie, Mr. Rainey was a soft-spoken leader who could crack the whip when the occasion demanded.

Dean of the House, having served longer than any other living member, the veteran liberal became Speaker on March 4, 1933, when John Garner, of Texas, became Vice President and presiding officer of the Senate. He presided over the last two sessions of the House, one called specially by President Roosevelt on taking office.

Although of pleasant personality, he was at times bitter in debate and during his early career was known as "poison-tongued" because of his caustic remarks in committees and one the floor of the House.

With the passing of the years, he became more considerate of his political foes, but he was severe in his criticism of Andrew W. Mellon, and later Ogden L. Mills, Republicans, during the tenure of each as Secretary of the Treasury.

KNOWN AS FARMER

A native of Carrollton, Ill., where he was born August 20, 1860, he attended Amherst College, Mass., and the Union College of Law, Chicago, and returned to Carrollton to practice law. Always around Carrollton, however, he was known as a farmer, owning 320 acres. His father and grandfather before him had been farmers.

Roosevelt Likely To Attend Funeral

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt probably will attend the funeral of Henry T. Rainey, late Speaker of the House, if funeral arrangements are such as to permit him to leave Washington.

The President is awaiting a decision on funeral arrangements before making final plans. The President indicated to friends he would attend if at all possible.

When the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth died in South Carolina, Herbert Hoover, then President, attended the funeral at Cincinnati.

During his earlier years in the House Rainey fought the iron rule of Speaker Joseph Cannon, Republican "czar" of the House. He aided Senator Norris, then a representative, in breaking down "Cannoism." He supported President Wilson in the World War era, particularly during the terrific fight over the declaration of war against Germany.

Spurns Fame In Films for Wedded Bliss

MARGARET M'CONNELL

Cigaret Ad Beauty 'Walks Out' on Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Margaret McConnell, who appeared in many cigaret advertisements, has "walked out" on the movies, married and plans to stay out.

On the strength of popularity won in the cigaret ads, Miss McConnell was brought to the films with considerable ballyhoo and assigned minor roles, to prepare for a large one. One day she turned up missing.

While studio agents were searching for her word came from Chicago that she had married William Periera, wealthy architect.

LONG SETS OUT AS REFORMER

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Senator Huey P. Long whetted a broadsword of reform today on the grindstone of newly made law and cast a hungry eye on the political neck of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

Forces arose to dull its edge, but the Louisiana Kingfish, flanked by the power of state soldiery and armed to the teeth with swiftly enacted legislation, indicated he was nearly ready to strike the blows by which he hopes to destroy the Walmsley political power.

One of the new laws enacted at Baton Rouge last week in a special session which the Senator inspired and which his political ally, Gov. O. K. Allen, summoned, is aimed at lotteries. The Senator claims that collections from these lotteries have been important factors in financing the "regular," or Walmsley, political faction.

As soon as Gov. Allen signs the 27 special bills which the Legislature passed, Senator Long has indicated he will begin an inquiry into New Orleans vice and gambling. The Governor was expected to sign the bills before nightfall.

CAPITAL EYES RISE IN PRICE OF FOOD

Will Guard Public Against Gougers, Aide Warns

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A rise in food prices as a result of the drought is inevitable, Dr. Frederick C. Howe, consumers' counsel of the AAA, said today.

At the same time, he asserted, "exaggerated reports" of the possible increase in the cost of living and promising a fight against profiteering.

Efforts will be made to check exorbitant prices by giving the public full information, He said.

"Exaggerated reports are being spread as to prospective increases in the price of food. That misrepresentation takes advantage of consumers and exposes them to raids by profiteers.

"But the consumers should follow closely official reports on the movement of food supplies and prices. They will help them to buy wisely and economically, and to spot unwarranted price increases."

He emphasized that there will be sufficient food "for the larger part of the usual American food requirements," but conceded that people may have to change their diet to keep down cost. He said:

"We are going to give consumers every possible help in judging the fairness of price changes. We are going to do everything we can to develop intelligent buyers' skepticism and tell the housewife how to feed her family on low-priced but nutritious foods. We are inviting food merchants of Washington to tell us their side of food problems as they may develop."

Distribution of the consumers' guide and use of the newspapers and radio to inform the public on food prices will be the chief weapons against profiteers, Dr. Howe said his organization lacked police power. Prosecutions for violation of the anti-trust laws could be made to halt profiteering, he said.

The present rise in food prices, which started in the last half of April when some drought effects were first anticipated, advanced the general level of food prices 3 per cent by the end of July.

Thus far, Dr. Howe said, price increases have been justified. The spread between farm prices and city retail prices does not seem to have been increased more than enough to cover increased wages and processing taxes, he said.

Dr. Howe asserted that his organization checked an increase in bread prices last year by giving information to consumers.

C. P. Perkins Dies, Cousin of Penrose

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Charles Penrose Perkins, retired civil engineer and member of an old Pennsylvania family, is dead at his home in suburban Rosemont. He was 89.

A cousin of the late Senator Boise Penrose, Perkins was related to other old families in the state, including the Strouds, the Hallowells and the Keiths. He formerly was an official of the Pennsylvania Railroad engineering department.

Weather Conditions

The low that was centered over North Dakota Saturday morning was north of the Great Lakes yesterday morning, and this morning it is well down the St. Lawrence Valley. The disturbance produced rather generous rains over Wisconsin and Michigan and only light amounts elsewhere along its path. The low is followed by a high centered over Southern Minnesota. The high is producing clear skies over the lake region and the Ohio Valley states, and a rather marked drop in temperature. The weather is now cool over the plains states and there were no high maximum temperatures yesterday except in Oklahoma, Arkansas and Northern Texas. The highest reported is 106 degrees at Oklahoma City. A low in Saskatchewan and extending down over the Rocky and Mountain states is causing a change towards warmer weather over the Far West.

Mussolini Leads Troops To King Emanuel

SCARPERIA DEL MUGELLO, Italy, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini, who is also Minister of War, leaped from his automobile today and set out afoot with his troops engaged in war maneuvers.

He had been following them in his roadster, but he abandoned the car when the soldiers struck out across a rough terrain which the car was unable to negotiate.

Il Duce marched along for hours.

King Victor Emanuel came up with another detachment of troops from another direction and the two leaders of Italy met in the middle of a "battlefield."

The two greeted each other, then leaned against the carriage of a heavy field piece and chatted for half an hour.

ROME, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini is expected to assure Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of the active and united support of Italy, France and England for Austrian independence when the two statesmen meet tomorrow in Florence.

The Associated Press was reliably informed today that diplomatic exchanges have been made among Rome, Paaris and London in the last few days toward this end.

An authoritative source said the three capitals have been in frequent contact since the installation of the new Austrian government, succeeding that of the assassinated Chancellor Dollfuss. These capitals, it was learned, now have decided to reinforce their united front with a reference to Austrian independence.

When Mussolini sees Schuschnigg tomorrow he will therefore express to him not only the determination of Italy to uphold the independence of Austria, but he likewise will tell the decision of France and Great Britain toward the same conclusion.

BOTHERED ABOUT ROMANCES? COLETTE GOES SWIMMING!

TRUCK DRIVER QUITS RICH BRIDE

that's going to do the annuling —not her?"

BACK TO OLD LOVE

And like the vivacious Colette he said he is going to stick to an old love on the South Side.

Mrs. Maude Brunner, at whose home the bride is staying, has the Manila cablegram.

It was sent by Mrs. Rosalie Mulvihill, who divorced Colette's father four years ago in California and at the same time received custody of the then 17-year-old girl.

Though dated July 13 Mrs. Brunner did not disclose it until today. The message read:

"Heard Colette having difficulties at home. Stop. Please take her with you if satisfactory, this being your authority. Stop. Arrive there September. Stop. Thanks."

THOSE 'LITTLE STORIES'

Mrs. Brunner, who is a young looking woman in her 30s and has several girls and boys of her own to take care of besides Colette, put down these fast and hard rules for Colette's future behavior:

"She is not making any more lies for publication—I'm not going to allow her to talk to any reporters. She's in my care and custody, but if Tommy wants her he can come and get her."

Some of those "little stories" she mentions were learned in an Associated Press wire story from Manila where Colette had lived for the past year before coming to Pittsburgh in May.

A stir, it said, was created in Manila by the bride's statement she previously had been wedded to Isidro Paredes, son of the speaker of the Insular House of Representatives, and that the marriage had been annulled.

HE'S A GRANDFATHER

This was flatly denied today by Speaker Quintin Paredes, who also took occasion, along with Mrs. Mulvihill, to refute Colette's assertion he soon would marry her mother.

The Speaker already is married, is a grandfather and the head of a large family. Mrs. Mulvihill also has remarried since her divorce, being the wife of a petty officer in the United States Navy, now proceeding to China with the Asiatic Fleet, the dispatch said.

Speaker Paredes said also his son had no intention of going to Pittsburgh to marry Colette, adding:

"I guess there's some mistake."

Mrs. Mulvihill said she was ready to help her daughter obtain her annulment. She said:

"Colette will have to make her own decision in this matter. If she wan't to live with Creen that's her affair."

She said she had planned sailing for the States, but changed her mind and is now awaiting word from her daughter.

NOT FATHER'S HEIRESS

Further details on the "madcap" marriage were given by Mulvihill, who is assistant manager of taxes for the Gulf Oil Company, in a telephone conversation.

He said that the court order giving his wife custody of the girl four years ago makes him "powerless to do anything," but that he was going to consult an attorney today. He said:

"She is just 16 and it's legally up to her mother to stop her from making crazy statements.

"I asked her to come here for a visit from Manila when I heard she was going to marry the Spaniard. I'm not against her marrying him but I think she is entirely too young to be married.

"She came here in May and I forbade her seeing or going with this crowd she is now with. She is too headstrong to listen.

"Also she is no heiress of mine."

Mulvihill said that he was going to try to have the Juvenile Court authorities take charge of Colette.

They were John Major and Agnes Feiling, of Pittsburgh, married at 2:30 a. m., and Robert Blume, of Pitsburgh and Gennie Nitkowski, of Ambridge, married at 4:30 a. m.

WITH DOUG GONE SYLVIA SEEKS SOCIETY SET

By NATALIE DE BOGORY

International News Service.

MONTE CARLO, Aug. 20.—Lady Sylvia Ashley, the former actress who was Douglas Fairbanks' almost constant companion during his recent sojourn in Europe, settled down to a new life today, still surprised by his precipitate departure and return to the United States.

Lady Ashley, whose titled husband has sued her for divorce, naming Fairbanks as co-respondent, was bewildered and shocked by the film star's unexpected leave-taking.

With Fairbanks gone, and with no prospect of his return to Europe, Lady Ashley has placed herself in the hands of her fashionable society set.

The hours she used to spend aquaplaning with the screen actor she now devotes to friends such as the Hon. Kate Norton, Lady Bridgett Poulett, Lady Baillie, Archibale Chisholm and Capt. David Margesson.

They have constituted themselves her bodyguard, warding off reporters and photographers.

They are, as a matter of fact, more than a bodyguard—they are a cordon. They gather at the foot of the hotel stairs to greet Lady Ashley and surround her whenever she leaves, and are now adept at spiriting her by devious ways to bathing beaches or smart clubs.

Lady Ashley, her friends understand, must now face the future and her husband's divorce action alone. They are convinced Fairbanks has rung down the curtain on this episode in his career, and will not return.

Bang! War? No, Just Melons In Kansas

One farmer reported his melons bursting on the vines and expressed belief that the extreme

False Joints Carved In Uncracked Stones at New Postoffice Entrance

Attempts by the builders of Pittsburgh's new $5,000,000 Postoffice to replace cracked stones in the facade have created an "architectural botch" on the imposing new structure, architects and art experts say.

In several places, they point out, the builders have not removed the whole of a broken stone, often one more than a yard long, but only enough to cut out the crack.

The result, when a smaller stone is set in the wall to replace the cut-out portion, is that two smaller stones replace the single large one. This means a joint, the architects explain, that spoils the harmony of the stone course as designed in the original plan.

A particularly ugly example of this fault, they say, occurs just below the arch on each side of a Grand street entrance. It was obvious that the extra joint would show up plainly, throwing the regular arrangement of the stones out of balance.

So to cover this imperfection, workers moved to the other side of the entrance and cut a fake joint in a sound, uncracked stone to match the new joint on the opposite side. Indicating this, a noted architect said:

"It presents a glaring defect, and spoils the architectural symmetry, which is the strength and beauty of any building. It may have been necessary to make such repairs as were made, but it none the less is to be regretted."

Other places where stones have been cut and replaced by "patchwork" have been noted in other parts of the building. To remove a crack in the corner of one huge granite block workmen chiseled out a small square. A new small stone set in this spot, it was explained, seriously mars the appearance of the facade.

In offering to explain the imperfections the architect said it was possible that some unseasoned stones were used in the construction of the building, which later cracked as they seasoned.

Stone quarried between October and April, generally, is ruled out in all specifications, this architect said, due to frost and other damaging chemical reactions caused by cold weather.

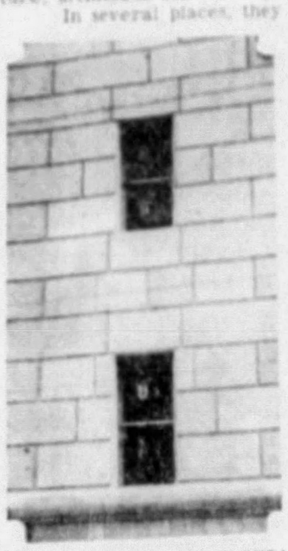
Maj. Robert Greenfield, supervising engineer for the government during the building's construction, refused to comment.

A defending architect said:

"I deny that it mars the beauty of the building in any way. I am an architect of long experience and I know something about these things. It is an established practice to make such repairs and to cut false joints.

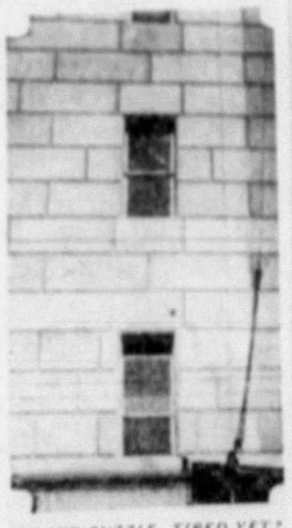
"As for the big granite stone, where we have cut a crack out of one corner, inserting a 'Scotchman,' I would consider it the height of unreasonableness to cut out the whole of that big stone, four feet by six in size, for one small crack.

"Neither do I believe that the design of the facade is damaged by the changes. The jointing of the stone is always more or less optional. If the public's attention wasn't called to it, no one would ever notice it.



PUZZLE: YOU FIGURE IT OUT!

Compare the "mortar joints" around the lower-row window with those surrounding the upper window. But read this story first.



SECOND PUZZLE: TIRED YET?

TWO ARCH LINES: PICK OUT THE OLD AND THE NEW ONES

Workmen began chiseling out the cracked limestone blocks June 5 as engineers of the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, conducted an investigation into the cause of the breaks.

Declining to give any opinion on the cause of the cracks, Maj. Greenfield explained that the workmen would cut out the upper part of the stone and then, before raising the lower remaining piece, they would examine the bedding of mortar.

"Other buildings have these troubles and make these repairs. I cannot understand why your paper has to write a story about this one."

He refused to reveal what financial arrangement had been made to pay for the repairs between the government and the contractor, the Aronberg-Fried Company of New York.

A campaign, led by Congressman Henry Ellenbogen, to have the broken stones properly replaced was started soon after the fissures were noticed, in the spring of 1933, and in the fall Comptroller General T. McCarl advised the Treasury Department to withhold sufficient money from the contractors to pay for the repairs. Ellenbogen reported that the Treasury Department ordered replacement of the broken stone in May.

TOWN TO PRAY FOR RECOVERY OF 'BABBLER'

International News Service.

MT. GILEAD, O., Aug. 20.—Residents of Edison, tiny Ohio town located near here today were petitioning the Rev. Willard Grant, the town's only minister, to return from his vacation at Pomeroy, O., to head a "campaign of prayer" for the recovery of Donald L. Campbell, 32, Ohio's "talking sickness" victim.

The movement to exert the power of prayer on behalf of the man, who has been talking incessantly now for the last 14 days, was started while members of the Campbell family and the family doctor clung to a close-lipped silence regarding the condition of the talking sufferer.

Despite the stand-off of silence, it was reliably learned that Campbell's condition today was unchanged as he entered the fifteenth day of his talking siege.

Campbell sits in the living room of his parent's home and talks on continuously, despite the efforts of attending physicians to bring his ailment under control.

His mother, her daughter-in-law (Campbell's wife) and other relatives sit with the talking sickness victim in 15-minute shifts, occasionally dropping a "yes" or "no" into the conversation when he asks a question requiring such a reply.

Typical of Campbell's conversation is the following:

"Joe and I used to go swimming in Willow Creek years ago, but now he is in favor of a tax on cigarets. The Ohio cigaret tax is all wrong. It's hard to be a truck driver in Columbus. The radio was pretty good last night, don't you think, but I'm not getting any better."

ROYALTY DENY KIDNAP THREAT

LONDON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Rumors of threats to kidnap the Princesses Elisabeth and Margaret Rose, of Great Britain's ruling house, were denied today by sources close to King George.

Col. Bowes Lyons, brother of the Earl of Strathmore, said no special precautions are being taken to guard the granddaughters of the King, and that an outbreak of scarlet fever was the reason the girls had not been out on shopping trips.

They are staying at Glamis Castle, in the highlands of Scotland.

The Sunday Express said the princesses and their parents, the Duke and Duchess of York, were being guarded as though "every casual visitor to the vicinity of the castle were a potential gangster."

The girls are third and fourth in line—Elisabeth third—for succession to the throne. Ahead of them are their uncle the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York.

BOY SAD, FACING GRAND JURY IN 'TRAGEDY'

Universal Service.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 20.—On a high note of drama the curtain was soon to fall upon the first act of this city's real life "American Tragedy", with District Attorney Thomas M. Lewis the center of action.

For today or tomorrow Lewis was to ask the grand jury to indict 21-year-old Bobby Edwards for first degree murder for the slaying of Freda McKechnie, his neighborhood sweetheart and expectant mother of his child, in the waters of Harvey's Lake last month so that he might marry the more cultured, more attractive Margaret Crain, East Aurora (N. Y.) music teacher.

RELATIVE EXCUSED

George P. Williams, of Kingston, was excused from service on the grand jury by Judge John B. Fine when it was revealed he was a relative of Edwards.

In view of the youthful mining engineer's alleged three confessions it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that an indictment will be returned not later than Wednesday and the case then will be listed for trial probably on September 10, the opening day of Criminal Court.

District Attorney Lewis has declared repeatedly that he will press for the death verdict.

Edwards' attorneys, Leonard D. Morgan and John Phillips, are youthful and not widely experienced in criminal law.

TWO COURSES EYED

It is believed they will follow one of two courses in the fight to save their client from the electric chair: either they will try to convince the jury that Freda died of shock when Bobby told her point blank he was going to marry "the other girl" or else they will plead non-vult contendere—guilt without blame.

BROODS IN CELL

If they have scanned the records of Luzerne County in the hope of finding a way of saving Bobby, they have discovered that not one defendant in a first degree murder case pleading non-vult contendere has been sentenced to die by the trial judge.

BARRY'S DEATH STILL STUDIED

Possibility that the fatal shooting of former Police Inspector John W. Barry, whose body was found in his garage last Wednesday, will be re-enacted was abandoned today as the Coroner's office and homicide detectives continued their investigations.

Meanwhile, Coroner W. J. McGregor, who has refused to accept the accidental killing theory of the homicide department, announced he would consider every angle of the case before reporting an official cause of death.

Funeral services for Barry were held Saturday, followed by burial in Calvary Cemetery.

DROWNING DANCER SAVED

World Fair Musician Pulls Ruth Pryor From Lake

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Ruth Pryor, former premier danseuse of the Chicago Civic Opera, was saved from drowning in Lake Michigan by a World's Fair orchestra leader after a huge wave washed her overboard from a speedboat in which she was returning to the fair.

Miss Pryor, who dances at a fair concession, was seated at the rear of the boat and fell overboard as the boat neared the Randolph street wharf Saturday night. She was rescued by George Devron, orchestra leader at the same concession.

As it neared the dock, the speedboat ran into rough water. Devron plunged into the lake and swam back to the boat with the dancer.

RATTLER WRITHES IN MINISTERS' GRIP

Many Skeptics See Snake Writhe, but Refuse to Bite

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A large rattlesnake with eight rattlers twisted and turned in the hands of two Church of God evangelists before several hundred people—many of them doubting Thomases—at a meeting last night, but nothing happened.

The snake just wouldn't bite.

Scattered about in the large audience of the open air meeting were numerous spectators who said they were skeptical of the performance of the Rev. D. L. Dodson, of Nashville, Tenn., and the Rev. Paul Jones, of Mobile, Ala.

Some said the snake's fangs had been removed. Others said that undoubtedly the reptile's poison sacs had been emptied.

Meanwhile, Mr. Dodson and Mr. Jones continued handling the snake.

Carl Lumpkin said the snake's fangs were all right. Carl's father caught the snake.

Mr. Dodson said he or any member of his party would handle any snake anyone wanted to bring them if the "spirit of God" was "upon them."

But—unless they "felt the spirit" there would be no snake-handling, the minister said.

STAR'S HOME RANSACKED

JANET GAYNOR

Janet Gaynor Away, Mystery Intruder Forces Way In

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Janet Gaynor's home was mysteriously entered, several rooms ransacked and her private desk forced open, a Mrs. Venner, who said she was a maid at the home, reported to police today.

Miss Gaynor has been traveling in Europe and the last advice her studio had was that she was in Spain. She plans to return here the latter part of September to make a new picture.

M'NAIR WARNS HE MAY SLASH POLICE FORCE

Oakland Police Station, thinks it's his duty.

Amid the policemen on guard in three shifts of eight hours each think it's a pretty good job—if not exciting.

Ons hearing of the alert "police eye" focused on "Billie's" for almost two months now, Mayor McNair drove out to the now famous apartment at 3400 Fifth avenue yesterday to see what was doings.

Up popped an officer who said he was James Goslin, brother of the well-known "Goose" Goslin. His words were:

"I'm a radio car man, but was detailed here to watch that no one enters the place. I don't know the reason. It's my job and I have to do it."

DOORS GUARDED

Nobody is allowed in the three front doors or the two in the back until the law asks.

"Where are you going. Who are you? What's your name."

If you're a magazine or maybe a hosiery salesman, they said they might let you in.

That's what Harry Conolly, another officer on duty outside, said of the alleged disorderly house which came into the news on July 9 at a startling meeting of the Police Research Commission.

Seated on a chair along the Halket street sidewalk Officer Conolly said that they have been watching the place 24 hours a day, that it was tiresome at first but that he's kind of used to it now.

All this sitting and watching he said has been in progress since Mrs. Charlotte Ryan, of 27 Wabash avenue, told the commission that she saw the place's books and that it earned $92,000 one year with only $6 of it for income tax. Her complaint was that her son, Joseph, spent too much time in the place.

POLICE THREATS

No, nobody has been arrested for entering the house since then—none that the officers remember. But they went so far to say that if anyone got in that they didn't allow they were going to "bump" it off.

Nor have the officers seen any of the rich clientele, the business and social leaders said to have visited the establishment during the seven years it is alleged by the police to have operated.

Of this vigilant police net, Director Bell said:

"Some time ago orders were sent to the Oakland district to keep this place under close watch. I did not know a special detail was on duty there. All I know is that the place has been watched several weeks."

DORSEY NOT INFORMED

Acting Supt. Dorsey said:

"I don't know what he's (Inspector Moore) doing out there or what the detail is."

Inspector Moore admitted detailing "about five or six men" to the Schaible place, adding:

"You know what sort of a place it is and it might open up again. We have to watch it. "And anybody who goes in is playing with fire!"

Mayor McNair on learning of Moore's statement exclaimed:

"Yes, but it seems to be an awful waste of the taxpayers' money. The police vigilance appears to be overdone."

Two more officers of the rather unusual police detail smiled on their jobs and their vigilance when questioned, but would say nothing for publication.

Half the time, they said—smiling again—Billie's not even at home.

2-WORD MEETING

The Mayor's second attempt to have Council affirm his appointment of Ward Bonsall as City Solicitor to succeed Cornelius D. Scully met with a dismal failure, because only two words were spoken officially in the meeting.

President Robert Garland looked down at the other two men who had answered the call, William J. Soost and Walter Demmler, and said:

"No quorum."

When the brief meeting was over, the Mayor announced he would make no more attempts to call special meetings. He said:

"If the Councilmen are not interested enough in their city to meet, I place the whole responsibility on them."

Garland told reporters that the "law department emergency" was really more imagined by the Mayor than real. He said Bonsall's recess appointment as solicitor was perfectly all right, and that Bonsall could appoint assistants to replace the four who resigned with Scully.

And he indicated that Council would want assurance from Bonsall that he would conduct the department along "legal lines" and not be subject to McNair's "whims."

MORALS COURT 'JUDGE'

His Honor presided in Morals Court yesterday, then issued an order which takes away almost all of that court's business. He directed that hereafter only cases involving morals be heard there.

Tippling husbands, arrested on complaint of wives or mothers, shall be arraigned in their own districts. Then, the Mayor said, the arresting officer could appear against the defendant. This will not appeal to any arresting officers, who would have to give up some of their sleep to testify against a drunk.

The Mayor banged that whimsical note again by suggesting that drunks should be driven home in the police radio cars. In case of puncture, no doubt a second car could be shot out to pick up the drunks lest they become impatient.

FRIENDLY TO TROUBLED

In Morals Court His Honor was friendly—and informal—with the prisoners most of them arraigned for drunkedness. He left his seat on the bench and sat on a chair with the prisoners about him.

To one woman held on such a charge, he gave a street car token after she denied she had been drunk.

To several wives who had their husbands arrested for imbibing too freely he told them he would let the men go or sentence them to a year in jail—no more, no less. He discharged all of them when the women disapproved of the 12-month absence.

'WAGON' FOR HIZZONER

All of which leads up to the ride His Honor took today.

At Central Police Station, after a conference with Magistrate J. W. McGowan, he asked the drivers of the wagon if they wouldn't, pleas, haul him up to his office:

"How about it, can I ride the front seat with you?"

Yes, he could, and did. En route he observed:

"They'll think I'm looking for Kane."

BREWER KIDNAP HUNT SPEEDED

LONDON, Ontario, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—There were unconfirmed reports today that arrests would be made in the case of John S. Labatt, London brewer, who was held for three days last week by kidnapers and then released.

Police authorities refused to make any statement. They were believed to be concentrating a search for the abductors along the border area of Windsor and Detroit.

Labatt, who is staying in the apartment of his brother here, was said to have recovered sufficiently from his experience to "be up and around the house."

GARBAGE PLANT BIDS EXTENDED

With today the last day for receiving bids for construction of incinerator plants at the Brilliant Pumping Station and in Manchester, the date of receiving bids was extended by Mayor McNair to September 6.

Dr. Ray P. Moyer, Health Director, explained letters had gone out to construction concerns to withhold bids until action is taken by the County Commissioners. The city must have a permit from them for disposal of garbage before the plants can be built, he said.

PASTOR AGAIN VANISHES

GOLDSBORO, N. C., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The Rev. B. H. Askew, 39-year-old evangelist, who turned up in Nashville, Tenn., Saturday, after a bizarre disappearance from his home here last Tuesday, today was again on the list of the unreported.

Askew, after questioning by Nashville and federal authorities, was reported to have left Nashville for home with money sent him by his wife, 30-year-old former mountain school teacher.

Expected about 10 p. m. last night, he failed to arrive as a throng awaited him. Expected again at 5:10 a. m. and 11 a. m. today, he again failed to appear, either time and relatives professed ignorance as to his whereabouts or intentions.

Protest to Court High Water Rates

Charging excessive rates for poor service and an inferior quality of water, residents of East McKeesport and nearby sections plan court action against the water firm operated by J. Audley Pierce, of McKeesport, according to Burgess John T. Small, of East McKeesport.

Small stated yesterday that a fund to finance the action has been oversubscribed. About 900 families are served by the firm, he said.

White Mountain Inn Burns, Guests Safe

PLYMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Fire today swept the Pemigewasett House, causing damage estimated at $50,000. The 100-room structure is the largest summer hotel in the White Mountain summer resort. At the time of the fire, 58 guests were registered and all escaped uninjured.

The cause of the fire was not determined.

1 DEAD, 25 HURT IN PRISON RIOT

PONTIAC, Ill., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The identity of the ringleaders of a prison escape plot which brought rioting and one death to the Illinois State Reformatory was the object of an official investigation today. Property worth $50,000 was destroyed.

Leo Pinuk, 24, a convict sentenced to one to 14 years from Chicago for larceny, was killed and 22 other prisoners and three guards were injured during the riot which broke out Saturday afternoon while the inmates were watching a baseball game between the prison players and a team from Springfield, Ill.

Beginning with a fist fight between two prisoners the disorder spread rapidly. When the guards tried to separate the fighting inmates, the prisoners attacked the guards, and there was a concerted rush to the south wall by one group. The guards fired one volley over the heads of the fleeing men, but when this failed to check their flight rifles were turned directly at rioters, stopping them.

Two prisoners were seriously wounded.

Runaway Cow Drags Farm Boy to Death

YORK, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A cow dragged Domonick Dravk, 21, of near Lewisberry, to his death yesterday.

Dravk had fastened a rope to the cow's halter and looped the other end about his neck. When the animal ran away he was unable to free himself.

LANSING WIDOW DEAD AT 68

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Eleanor Foster Lansing, widow of Robert Lansing, President Wilson's Secretary of State, will be buried today not far from the summer home at Henderson Harbor where for 40 years she entertained notables of many nations. She died yesterday at the age of 68.

Mrs. Lansing was born at Evansville, Ind., daughter of John Foster, a Republican, who succeeded James G. Blaine as Secretary of State. In 1890 she married Robert Lansing, who succeeded William J. Bryan as Wilson's Secretary of State in 1915. He served until 1920.

Lansing's wife accompanied him to the world peace conference in 1919. Returning, she resumed her part in Washington's social life. Among her guests had been the Prince of Wales, Grand Duke Cyril of Russia and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium.

RUMMER JAILED AS 'LOITERER'

Although he confessed to charges of violating the state liquor laws and admitted peddling moonshine from a basket, Kenneth Fitten, 23, of 1024 Liverpool street, was fined $50 for "loitering" by Magistrate Anthony Lucas in North Side Police Court today.

Rather than turn Fitten over to state enforcement agents for prosecution on liquor charges before an alderman, Magistrate Lucas changed the charge to loitering and assessed the $50 fine, despite the fact that a city ordinance fixes $5 as maximum fine for loitering.

Fitten was unable to pay the fine and was sent to jail for 30 days.

Suit Seeks to Oust 'Party' Councilmen

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A petition filed in Common Pleas Court today demanded that 17 members and officers of Philadelphia City Council resign or give up their political connections.

The action is based on provisions of the city charter, and cited as an alleged violation the fact Edwin R. Cox, president of City Council, is chairman of the Republican City Committee.

Former State Head Of Osteopaths Dies

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Dr. E. Clair Jones, 57, former president of the Pennsylvania Osteopathic Association, died yesterday at his Mt. Gretna summer home of a heart attack.

Electricity has made that weekly washing a matter of only a couple of hours . . . . leaving many a mother time for relaxation and pleasure—even on Monday. And electricity is so inexpensive that it's within the means of everyone . . . . only 1¢ buys the electricity to operate an electric washer for 1 hour and 18 minutes . . . . and it costs less than 2¢ to do the entire washing for a family of four.

The length of time the appliances named in this advertisement can be operated is based on 4c per Kwh, in which classification a large percentage of our customers come. If your use of electricity entitles you to the advantages of a 3c rate you can operate the same appliances proportionately longer. However, those who pay 5c for electric energy can operate these appliances only four-fifths of the length of time stated.

GERM-BRAVING CONVICTS SAFE

CANON CITY, Col., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Two Colorado Penitentiary convicts here, who gambled with their lives for a chance at freedom in an experiment with an asserted tuberculosis preventive serum, apparently have suffered no ill effects from the injections they underwent.

The men are Mike Schmidt, 53, and Carl Erickson, 62, both lifetermers. They were the first selected to submit to a test of the serum discovered by Dr. H. J. Corper, of the National Jewish Hospital at Denver.

The convicts have been promised freedom by Gov. E. C. Johnson.

Erickson works daily in the prison blacksmith shop and Schmidt is working on a prison farm, Warden Roy Best said. Neither has developed any symptoms of tuberculosis after being injected with the deadly germs. Previously they had been given injections of the serum which Dr. Corper hopes will prevent persons from getting the disease.

Two weeks ago, two more convicts, Lloyd F. White, 54, and Harry Rose, 55, were given their first inoculations of the serum.

Now Anita Loos Lists 'Six Greatest Blondes'

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The "six greatest blondes in motion picture history," as selected by Anita Loos, half-pint-sized brunette writer of the book, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," are:

Ann Harding, Constance Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Jean Harlow, Marion Davies and Lillian Gish. Miss Loos said:

"As I have known them, these women divide all the qualities one could ever want in a woman. They have humor, the maternal sense, deep sympathy, great mental breadth, and, of course, exceptional physical beauty."

Miss Loos said Jean Harlow and Lillian Gish have by far the greatest appeal to men of any women she had ever known, blonde or brunette. The writer said:

"The pull of these two girls on the other sex, however, is entirely different. Harlow appeals because, while feminine, she has the directness of a man. The sex appeal of Lillian Gish cannot be quite as definite classified, yet it is there to a terrific degree."

BRIDGE BREAKS, 100 IN RIVER

GLASGOW, Ky., Aug. 20 (AP).—A hundred picnickers were plunged 50 feet to the rocky shallows of Little Barren River yesterday when a narrow suspension bridge for foot traffic between the Buena Vista Hotel and Sulphur Wells collapsed.

At least 10 persons were hurt so badly as to need medical attention. There were unconfirmed accounts that four persons were killed.

Broken arms and shoulders were the chief injuries of those treated by Dr. E. V. Dunham, who was called from Edmonton, 10 miles south of Sulphur Wells. Five of those who were members of the picnic party were able to give coherent accounts of the accident early today and there were conflicting reports concerning the number and seriousness of the casualties.

Screams of the injured in a tangled mass on the stony river bed were mixed with the cries of distracted parents hysterical with fear for their children.

The bridge was 150 feet long. The weight of a hundred persons was too great a strain, and a cable snapped, dumping men, women and children 50 feet to the rock-bottomed shallows.

'ROCK-A-BYE-BABY'---ELECTRIC MOTOR DOES WORK

Mechanic Hitches 'Juice' to Crib, Cries Ceased

One Pittsburgh father is through walking the floor.

Crying babies, mankind early discovered, want to be on the move. For ages parents have rocked the floor in millions of homes.

It was, perhaps, a slight improvement when the rocking cradle was invented. And there have been mechanical cradles, wound up like a clock and rocked by a spring.

But it remained for Frank Sfara, of 4315 Graphic street, Squirrel Hill, to invent the electrically powered crib. One now in the bed where Emelda, his one-year-old daughter, sleeps.

Outwardly it appears an ordinary wrought iron trundle bed, but mounted underneath a small electric motor causes the bed to glide back and forth. The gentle level rise. Mrs. Sfara says almost magically quiets a crying baby.

Besides Emelda, there are two boys, Robert, 6, and Patrick, 8, in the family.

According to Mrs. Sfara, it was their family physician, Dr. Morris A. Cohen, who advised the father to build the gliding crib instead of the old-fashioned cradle type.

Sfara is an expert mechanic, inventor of a motor alarm to prevent car theft. He operates a garage. Besides the gliding crib in his own home, he has built another for Mrs. Mary Augustine, of New Castle, Pa., which includes a phonograph attachment to play lullabies a few moments after the crib begins to glide.

Frankly, we've been selling such quantities of canned foods the last few weeks that we're rather short in some lines; but we still have a wide variety of wanted fruits and vegetables priced on last summer's cost. We are not prophesying a canned food shortage or higher prices for next winter, but we know that the law of supply and demand controls the price of any merchandise and the replacement cost of the fruits and vegetables offered in this advertisement is considerably higher now than the price we paid last summer when we contracted for the 1933 pack. Thousands of housewives have considered it wise to stock up with a supply of good canned foods. Come to McCanns early this week and do likewise.

'LIVING DEATH' TO END FOR GIRL, 7

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Helen, thirteen, 7 years old, who lives in a world of her own, appears certain to receive the education that will release her from an invisible prison.

Helen, a vigorous, cheerful lad who plays with an old doll, helps her mother with the dishes and attempts to mend her own clothes, is deaf, mute and blind.

PROBLEM SOLVED

For months Mrs. Viola B. Shepherd, county superintendent of schools at Bridgeport, Neb., where Helen lives, sought to arrange for her education. Were she not blind, she could have been educated at the Nebraska School for the Deaf. Were she not a deaf mute, she could have been educated in the state School for the Blind.

Inquiries by Mrs. Shepherd revealed that the Perkins Institution at Watertown, Mass., is the only school equipped for the education of those triply handicapped.

FUNDS FOUR IN

The institution agreed to take Helen for $600 tuition, on agreement that a teacher, to be given free tuition, accompany the girl. Miss Margaret Hoshor, 27, who has taught under Mrs. Shepherd for seven years, agreed to accompany Helen and to spend at least seven years in the work after leaving the institution. Then the Nebraska State Board of Control informed Mrs. Shepherd that probably Miss Hoshor could be added to the board's staff if she completed the training.

That left only the question of funds. Hearing the story of Helen's difficulties, a newspaper interested itself in the case and appealed to the public. The response was heavy and Saturday the fund reached $1,039 with contributions received from six states and the total still rising.

MYSTERY SINK WRECKS HOMES

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Engineers dug into mother earth today to find the cause for the sudden settling of houses in the south central and southwestern sections of the city.

Many of the houses have stood for 40 years or more and never before has such an underground mystery popped up. City Engineer Boyne probed through the soil in an attempt to solve the mystery. Much of the soil in the area is like clay and residents point out that the extreme heat, together with the long absence of rain, has resulted in the soil crystalizing into a fine dustlike sand.

Four dwellings, all of which were built about 40 years ago, were examined yesterday but no definite conclusion was reached. In these dwellings doors no longer close, windows no longer slide up and down and plaster has fallen from the walls and ceilings. However, city officials see no danger of damage great enough to cause the homes to be condemned or to make them uninhabitable.

Damage from the settling process thus far is estimated at around $100,000 but no definite figures are available.

COAL BARONS, UNION BACK NRA CODE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Those traditional enemies, the soft coal tycoons and the United Mine Workers of America, stand ready to join forces next winter to preserve their NRA code.

They agree that changes may be necessary. The operators are not altogether satisfied with price control provisions. The union insists the 40-hour week is too long to make a substantial dent in the rolls of unemployed miners. But, with a few exceptions among the operators, neither wants to go back to the days of cutthroat competition and consequent low wages that plagued the industry before NRA.

Just what the operators should recommend to Congress will be considered by a legislative committee of the National Coal Association here this week. Headed by John D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, the committee hopes to have a program mapped out for discussion with administration officials and legislators long before Congress convenes in January.

The mine workers, meanwhile, are quietly considering what revisions they might want, and lining up their strength to support them.

The union, which for several years before NRA had substantial membership only in Middle and Far Western soft coal fields, now has booming chapters in most fields all over the country. The vast Appalachian fields, reaching from Pennsylvania to Tennessee which turn out well over half of the nation's tonnage, are nearly 100 per cent unionized, the mine workers say.

Wages have increased in some instances 100 per cent, and nearly every miner in the country is working under a higher wage scale than a year ago.

INSULL DENIED TRIAL ALONE

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Samuel Insull Sr. was refused a severance today and ordered to stand trial with his 16 co-defendants September 18 on a five charge that they used the mails fraudulently in marketing corporation securities, primarily stocks.

Insull had asked to be tried separately, assuming responsibility for the conduct of the investment house and its calamitous crash, and pleading that a trial lengthened by the multiplicity of defense might endanger his health.

United States District Judge James H. Wilkerson himself raised the question today of the continuation of the trial if the elderly defendant should be too ill to attend. Well enough now to venture out to the World's Fair occasionally and listen to symphonic orchestra concerts, Insull's physicians nevertheless have pronounced his condition fragile because of a weak heart and diabetes.

Judge Wilkerson said he was particularly concerned over the possible situation if Insull should become too ill to continue the trial and the 16 co-defendants, officers and directors of Corporation Securities Company, including his son, Samuel Jr., should insist on continuing.

U.S. IN LEAGUE'S LABOR BODY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The United States agreed today to become a member of the International Labor Organization, an adjunct of the League of Nations, designed to improve the workingman's conditions throughout the world.

Acceptance by President Roosevelt of an invitation to join was made known by the State Department.

Government representatives emphasized that the acceptance authorized by Congress last session, does not involve the United States in any obligations under the covenant of the League of Nations.

All league members and a few non-league members hold membership in the labor organization.

Congress specified that United States membership in the group "would not impose or be deemed to impose any obligation or agreement upon the United States to accept the proposal of that body as involving anything more than recommendations for its consideration."

NATIONS HUNT KILLER OF GIRL

International News Service.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 20.—Authorities of two nations, the United States and Mexico, today sought the killer of pretty 16-year-old Celia Cota, victim of a brutal attacker, who beat and strangled her to death.

The pretty high school girl, daughter of Eduardo Cota, wealthy Mexican-American customs official, was found dead in the back yard of her home, ninth victim of "horror murders" here in the past four years.

Two suspects, one an American, the other a Mexican, were sought for questioning.

The American, many times questioned by police in crimes of a sex nature here, vanished shortly after the girl's ravished body was discovered. The Mexican, reputedly middle-aged, has entertained the impression that he had been wronged in a business deal with members of the Cota family, detectives reported. He had threatened revenge upon Cota.

STEEL PARLEY IN OHIO

PORTSMOUTH, O., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Representatives of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, and the federal government converged on Portsmouth today to hear complaints by union steel workers against the company.

The nature of the union workers' complaints was not divulged before the hearing began although it was believed the principal topic for discussion would be a request [illegible] the Amalgamated concerning [illegible]llective bargaining.

A regular election of employes [illegible] collective bargaining was held [illegible]e plant last June but Amal[illegible]ed members declined to [illegible]pate, insisting they would [illegible]nly in an election conducted [illegible]e Steel Labor Board.

[illegible]e local plant of Wheeling [illegible] has been closed since July 1, because, the company said, of insufficient orders.

HOLD ALUMINUM STRIKE PARLEY

Federal and state mediators were co-operating today in attempts to settle the aluminum strike, as a joint conference was arranged with Aluminum Company of America heads and strike leaders.

The conference, to be held in the Aluminum Company offices in the Gulf Building this afternoon, will be the first meeting between the two sides since 8,700 workers walked out of six Aluminum Company plants in the New Kensington district and three other states 10 days ago.

Federal Mediator Fred Keightly arranged the meeting which will be attended by Boris Shishkin and David Williams, of the American Federation of Labor; Fred A Wetmore, and J. P. Howlett, of Aluminum Workers' Council; Roy A Hunt, Aluminum Company president, and C. S. Golden, state mediator.

Mayor Denounced By Chicago Strikers

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A breach appeared today between union leaders and city officials in the motor coach strike.

Mayor Kelly, the state's attorney's office and police were assailed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, for "support of the Chicago Motor Coach Company against striking drivers and the harassing of legitimate drivers."

Troops Withdrawn From Kohler Plant

KOHLER, Wis., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Sheboygan County deputies took over police duty at this strike-torn village today as 250 National Guardsmen complied with Gov. A. G. Schmedeman's order to withdraw. The Governor told the troops that order in the future must be kept by local authorities.

The troops were called July 27, after two were killed and 43 wounded in strike rioting.

Big Textile Strike Aimed Against 'Stretch-Out'

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The primary object of the projected general strike in the cotton textile industry, set for "about Labor Day," was disclosed today as a fight against the machine.

Francis J. Gorman, head of the research department of the United Textile Workers of America, described it as a battle against the "stretch-out" system, under which more and more speeded-up machines are assigned each worker. Gorman termed the system:

"A true device of the devil. It is enslaving our workers, making nervous wrecks of them and bringing their usefulness to a premature end."

Gorman and other union leaders charged the system is a device to increase production without increasing the employed manpower or the individual wage of the worker.

Other demands in the union's order to its executive council to call a general strike include recognition of the union as the collective bargaining agency of the workers under article 7A of the National Recovery Act and betterment of living conditions. Union officials, however, state that the bargaining power is sought chiefly to remove the "stretch-out" system.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Louis Howe, Roosevelt's Chief Aide, Blamed for Major Homestead Blunder

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—There has been a lot of whispered speculation about who picked those summer collapsible houses for the cold and blustery subsistence homestead project at Arthurdale, Va.

Some people suspected Mrs. Roosevelt because of her pet project. Others noted a recent quiet change in personnel at the subsistence homestead division here and blamed the departing officials. Both suspicions are all wrong.

Howe is the greatest kidder of the administration. He can take it as well as give it, and he is taking it now, especially from the boys, who is something of a kidder himself at times.

Mr. Mallon

FACTS

The truth is that the thing was not half as bad as a warmed-up administration critic could make it sound, if he tried to. According to fair minded insiders, here is the way it happened.

The government was utterly without experience in subsistence homestead work. It decided to experiment with Arthurdale in a very cautious way before launching its program seriously.

Everyone agreed it was going to be difficult to get city customers for the homestead project. No matter how poor people are, they hate to leave the exaggerated pleasures of the city, the movies, the crowds and the lights, and go off to live three miles from nowhere.

Howe had some knowledge of fabricated camp houses and thought them attractive. He owned one. At that time, 50 homeless people were supposed to be waiting for some shelter at Arthurdale. Howe thought he could get fabricated houses up faster than any others and issued a rush order for 50.

EXPERIENCE

Everything happened thereafter which could possibly happen. The houses were delayed. When they arrived, that section of the country was in the grip of the coldest weather in many years. The houses were found to be without proper heating facilities, for that climate. Apparently the manufacturer thought he was sending them to Florida instead of West Virginia, or that they were for summer use. At any rate, they were unsuitable.

This spring, the houses had to be put on firm foundations, enlarged, properly heated. The cost mounted. Some say it is $7,000 and some say much less. But, whatever the cost, it was prohibitive for homesteaders. They could never have paid the government back for such expensive homes.

OUTCOME

All that it really means is that the homestead division found it could not be done that way. There were other similar experimental mistakes at Arthurdale, but they were less entertaining. They have been marked off on the government ledger to valuable experience. No one would have given them a second thought here except for the passion of prominent press which were installed in Arthurdale to overly enthusiastic persons outside the administration.

The homestead planners believe that have their Arthurdale alteration's work completed now. They have found out how to do the job. They have a check of $1,800 on cost of houses, and are confident they can work within it.

Unquestionably they will request more money at the coming session of Congress to supplement the $50,000,000 appropriated this far.

PRIMARIES

The administration politicians were not as happy about the recent primary results as some of their statements indicate, but neither are they sad.

The only amazing thing to them was the defeat of Clem Shaver in West Virginia by a youngster after Postmaster General Farley tried to lend Shaver a helping hand. They knew in advance that Donahey would win in Ohio. In both cases, they tried to make the best of things by taking the youngster and Donahey into the fold.

Messrs. Farley et al really believe they will win in both states this fall.

WORRY

Much more serious to them from a practical human standpoint was the victory of Boss Pendergast in the Missouri senatorial primary. Up to now Pendergast has been only a minor annoyance to the Farley plan. If his man wins the November election, he will become a major one.

The Farley boys are supposed to have had an arrangement with Pendergast up to now allowing him to win any obtainable appointments in his district. That arrangement has not worked out very well from Farley's standpoint, because Pendergast has occasionally kept voting men until Farley got around to suggesting the man Pendergast really wanted.

If Pendergast succeeds in sending his man to the Senate, he will have to be dealt with at headquarters here on a broader business basis.

NOTES

The TVA is boring stoves, refrigerators and water heaters as electrical equipment for its homes. It brakes no electrical equipment for its homes. It brakes no water pumps later, but no washing machines. The washing machine makers are up in arms. Interest on the public debt this year will amount to just about as much as it cost to run the entire federal government from the beginning of the republic to the John Quincy Adams administration, figuring the debt at 77 million and the interest at 833 million. Henry Wallace, the Agriculture Secretary, has a new car, just about twice as large as the old one. On a table near Mr. Roosevelt's desk is a three-masted schooner named "Prosperity." It has all sails set, but no wind.

The encampment committee yesterday was host at a luncheon to William H. Armstrong, of Racine, Wis., national commander-in-chief. Soon after a salute of 21 guns was fired in honor of the visitors at Monument Hill by the 107th Field Artillery.

In the afternoon national officers took part in memorial services for the late Col. Charles Young in the Ebenezer Baptist Church, Wylie avenue. Col. Young commanded a Negro regiment during the Spanish-American War. Speakers were Sanford R. Thomas, Gen. Churchill B. Mehard and Col. Benjamin Davis.

During the afternoon members of the national council of administration and commanders-in-chief attended a conference in the William Penn, and in the evening a joint memorial service was held in the Nixon Theater.

Officials of the organization said today that the convention may go on record as favoring stronger national defense, a new definition of "Americanism" and restoration of pension cuts suffered by the veterans of the Spanish War. About 12,000 were stricken from the pension lists by the economy act, it was estimated.

Girls Romp Unmolested in Shorts in Camp Fostered by Society Near 'Buck' McGovern Farm

Glenwillard Finds Garb Nothing to Fume About

The controversy over shorts in the city does not bother the girls at the Pleasant Hill Farm, near Glenwillard.

And it seems it does not even bother County Commissioner Charles C. "Buck" McGovern, whose home and farm adjoins the girls' summer camp.

More than 50 girls from Pittsburgh stores and offices every week take advantage of the healthful country air and food. And they wear shorts most of the day.

Miss Margaret Schodiatz, camp superintendent, said:

"I think shorts are perfectly all right—if the girls stay within their rights. We want them to have freedom, rest properly, and above all they must abide by the rules of the camp."

80TH DIVISION ASKS DEFENSES

CONNEAUT LAKE, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Members of the 80th Division, of World War fame, are on record with an emphatic disapproval of "the nation's neglect of its defenses."

They incorporated the disapproval in a resolution passed yesterday at the concluding session of the annual convention, in which they urged bringing the United States Air Corps "up to a par with the strongest foreign nation."

After re-electing their national commander and selecting Wheeling, W. Va., for next year's meet, the delegates passed resolutions favoring full payment of the government soldiers' bonus and reinstatement of compensation for veterans and widows of veterans.

Col. E. G. Peyton's re-election came after West Virginia members waged a strenuous campaign in behalf of Henry E. Neumann, of Wheeling, finally named senior vice commander. Col. Peyton is stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

M'NAIR LAUDS VETS, WEATHER

Mayor William N. McNair thinks the military is more powerful than his own police.

He said so this morning in an address of welcome to the Spanish War veterans.

The Mayor was escorted from his office in the City-County Building to the convention in the Nixon Theater by two uniformed veterans. Said he:

"Look, they're taking me to a meeting. That's more than my police can do with Councilmen."

He commented on Pittsburgh climate as being as fine as any vacation resort. He said:

"This cool weather suits me fine. It's fine vacation weather, but two of our Councilmen seem to enjoy the climate of Ireland better right now."

POND, SABELLI CRASH IN WALES

NEWPORT, Pembrokeshire, Wales, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—George Pond and Cesare Sabelli sadly surveyed today the wreckage of the airplane they had hoped would carry them on a return flight across the Atlantic.

While they were flying at a fast speed, the plane crashed into a hillside early yesterday when they attempted to make a forced landing on a hop from Dublin to Rome.

The fliers escaped serious injuries but were shaken up and bruised.

WAR-SCARRED FLAG HERE

The flag, unfurled over Morro Castle 35 years ago, symbolizing the passing of Spain from the Western Hemisphere, was brought to Pittsburgh today.

The frayed banner, patched with loving hands, is the property of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee Camp No. 1, United Spanish American War Veterans, in Richmond, Va. It was brought to the convention by Department Commander George Cummings and Senior Department Commander W. A. Beddinger.

Unfurled to view over Pittsburgh for the first time, the flag is being displayed at Virginia headquarters in the William Penn Hotel, where its proud guardians tell its history.

The flag, hoisted over the Spanish castle in 1899 by Maj. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, commanding the Seventh United States Army Corps, was handed down to the General's son, Lieut. Fitzhugh Lee, serving with the United States Engineers, and in turn was presented to the Virginia camp of Spanish War Veterans.

MILITARY BALL LEGION FINALE

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A glamorous military ball that lasted until past 3 o'clock in the morning, ended the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Department, American Legion.

The famous 28th "Iron" Division decided to hold its next convention in Harrisburg instead of with the legion, which selected Wilkes-Barre Friday as its conclave city.

Before the ball a noisy parade, in which there were more bugle and drum corps and bands than marchers, brought cheers from 75,000 citizens who lined the streets. Posts from Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Warren, O., were represented.

James Isherwood, Waynesburg attorney, who was elected new department commander, was stricken with a minor intestinal ailment and almost missed reviewing the marchers. He finally was able to reach the stand after receiving treatment at a hospital.

CRASH IN WALES INJURES POND

NEWPORT, PEMBROKESHIRE, Wales, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A rather serious dislocation of one of George Pond's ribs as a result of the crash of the Pond-Sabelli trans-Atlantic airplane was disclosed by an X-ray examination at a hospital here today.

Pond was able to move about. He and his flying companion, Cesare Sabelli, visited Newport Castle, where they were congratulated by the occupant, Lady Lloyd, on their escape from death when their plane crashed into a hillside early yesterday.

The fliers, who had started from Rome and intended to fly to New York from Dublin, were undecided today as to their plans.

After examining the airplane on the mountainside where it crashed an expert said:

"It can be repaired, but not here."

The pair flew the Atlantic in May, being forced down in Ireland on a projected non-stop flight to Rome.

GIANT STATUE DEDICATED

CHAMONIX, France, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—The largest statue in Europe, a monumental figure of Christ the King, was dedicated yesterday at the mountain hamlet of Coppeaux, facing Mont Blanc.

Eighty-six feet high and built of reinforced concrete with the surface treated to resemble the granite of the mountains which surround the figure, the statue is solid enough to resist the violent mountain storms prevailing in the region. It weighs more than 200 tons.

The Saviour is represented standing, the right hand raised in blessing, the left clasping a scepter. Crown, scepter and halo are coated with gold.

The pedestal forms a chapel in which are two altars, back to back, separated by a clear glass partition so that two priests can say mass at the same time, one facing Mont Blanc, the other the congregation.

Old Railroader Prefers Bicycle

LONDON. — (INS.) — William Fenwick, a South Shields laborer with two artificial legs, was fined $2.50 on a drunk charge and $2.50 for assault. The latter fine was for kicking a policeman.

PINCHOT GOING TO WASHINGTON

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 20.—(INS.)—Optimistic over prospects of avoiding the necessity of a special legislative session, Gov. Pinchot makes his belated flying trip to Washington this week in an effort to settle the state's relief problem.

The Governor was reported today to leave later in the week after Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, returns from abroad on Wednesday.

The federal government has declared Pennsylvania must begin to share in financing its relief load by September 1. All state lumps with the exception of an anticipated $6,000,000 in liquor stores profits has been spent. A special session is the only way, according to officials, that more money can be obtained.

All of Austria Blessed by Pope

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 20.—AP.—Pope Pius imparted a special blessing to the entire nation of Austria yesterday and observed that Austria is particularly dear to him "in these sad times."

The blessing was given as the Pontiff received 200 Austrian students who were accompanied by 14 priests and former Minister of Public Instruction Czermak.

Iowa Provides Jobs For Half of Seekers

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS.) — Less than two years ago, Iowa employment offices reported 100 applicants for every available job. During the last six months nearly half the applicants at federal re-employment offices were provided with jobs, Hans Pfund, director, reported.

TWO CHILDREN DIE OF BURNS

A 14-months old boy and a year-old boy were dead today from burns received when they spilled coffee on themselves.

Andy Caruso, age one year, of 3409 Lightner street, died in West Penn Hospital last night, two days after he had pulled hot coffee from a table in his home and suffered burns of the chest and hands.

Leonard Davis, 14 months, died in Pittsburgh Hospital from injuries sustained in the same manner. With a broom in his hand, he tipped a coffee pot from a stove in the cottage of his parents in Oakmont, July 26. Pneumonia also developed in his case, the morgue reported. The Davis family resides at 2162 Wylie avenue.

FAMILY FIGHTS HOME CONFISCATION

All Stand Guard As New Road Draws Near

Condemnation proceedings have been started by the County Commissioners to take possession of three acres of land owned by Charles W. Mertz, Crescent Township.

The land is necessary to relocate and widen the Stoops Ferry and Shousetown roads, and for the recoursing of an 80-foot channel for the Flaugherty Run Creek. The Mertz family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Mertz and their four children, is not going to give up its home "without a fight," Mertz says.

In the absence of Mertz, a Pittsburgh and Lake Erie piecetime inspector, Mrs. Mertz and her children, Lemoyne, 19; Mildred, 15; Harold, 13, and Alfred, 2, kept a watchful eye on county laborers who are busily working around their property.

The new road will cut through the one-story four-car garage, and the creek channel will take most of the seven-room one-story frame dwelling which had been the Mertz's home for 20 years.

BEHIND the SCENES with ROYALTY!

Versatile Rascal Who Gained Confidence of Queens, Princesses and Some Crowned Heads of Europe Reveals Intimate Facts Concerning the Private Lives of Nobility

Embroidery made by the Prince of Wales, an expert at fancy work.

IT is difficult for most people to think of kings and queens as men and women.

Yet royalty is, after all, just as human as the servants who wait on their royal masters and mistresses. Their human frailties are rarely reported because personages of title must wear the halo supposed to go with royalty.

But nobody need ever think again that people of royal birth are any different than those born in less noble families.

A clever jailbird, who was the biographer of some persons of high position, found out many facts about royalty that very few people know. Up to now he has preserved a discreet silence on most of the interesting things he saw; things never disclosed in print.

They are revealed, however, in the first of a new series of exciting articles in The American Weekly.

New Shows, Stars Being Groomed

By ARCASTER

Kibitzing around radio for ... First thing you know Kay Smith will be bobbing up in a full hour commercial program.

The new Federal Communications Commission has decided that broadcasting stations need no longer open and close the day with long announcements about their addresses. Unquoted and the permission of the commission.

Arthur Allen and Parker Fennelly, pioneer character actors, are stars of a new dramatic series at NBC to begin September 16. They will be known as "Bates and Tidbury." I wonder how many of the audience will recognize the piece as a virtual resurrection of the "Stebbins Boys." The pair can't use the Stebbins title because an agency for which they once worked holds the copyright. . .

Gus Arnheim begins an orchestra series from Los Angeles Cocoanut Grove, midnight August 28. . . . Gene Goldkette is in New York, forming an entirely new orchestra for radio work. Time was when Goldkette was larger in name than Whiteman and in greater control of the music in the Middle West than Meyer Davis is at Washington. . . .

The time for the program that will feature Andy from London and Amos from San Francisco, via KDKA, is 7 p. m. August 22. . . . Don Bestor's new WCAE programs bring his weekly waftings up to a total of six. . . . The same sponsor who will launch a series over an NBC web October 1, and continue thrice weekly with Willard Robison and Mildred Bailey, also bankrolls Freddy Martin's orchestra for the same product at CBS, beginning October 7.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Memos of a Columnist's Girl Friday.

Dear W.—Peddle me something, will you? The NRA officials have a symbolic way for actors—$40. Then why is it that the writers employed to help do the CWA troupes have a minimum of $1? They need a refresher in arithmetic if you asked me . . . 40 even if you dozen. And another thing: Where do they get the No when they abbreviate the word number, which hasn't any "o"? There's a new column due soon in a burlesque paper to be signed "Miss or Mashie Clark" . . . Mr. Lawrence of Arabia will conduct a Round Robin Tea. A Kentucky colonel who's been writing odes to oil for 20 years will contribute. Rosalie Stewart's Kentucky colonel who's been writing odes to oil for 20 years will contribute. Rosalie Stewart's "Ballyhoo" . . . replaces the Col. "The Bowery" . . . "B. T. A. K." . . . is not to be the title of the show at the Music Theater in Paris . . . The Dutch who has decided not to register the color change and I don't blame him . . . The show valley of Hoover's chuckle. The naughty strip-tease number at the Paris is the idea of a woman. Fannie Brice! Why, Fannie! . . . such a pretty butty girl! . . . Lew Brown and Harry Akst have at least three song hits, presumably modern, being: "I Don't Want to Be President" (If It Meant Pro Longin Your . . . several calls from Irate movie fans . . . swarming over the premises of "Dames." After some redecorating there ails to attract crowds the crowds came, only to be seen extreme side seats—where over 1,000 pews were roped off for "personal friends" . . . A neat way to make a public mad.

From a pal in Europe I got a letterful of . . . Constance Bennett, Eunice Coleman, formerly of "Scandals" and Robert McAlpine, related to the Royal Family, are . . . about each other . . . Sir John Latte's boy, Cecil, and Billie Joyce, ex-Vanities girl are ditto . . . As are Ruth Brande also of Vanities and Gretell Stevens—their romance began on the liner going mah! . . . Sandra Rambo has a new Prince—a white man! . . . I mean he's not from Nepal or any Indian tribe . . . Larry Fay's widow, Evelyn Crowell, still is heartsick with an orchestra bigwig, but he's married, so his name won't interest you . . . But Mary Co's, the lovely of the Casino de Paree, is the adored of . . . the Maharajah, whose horse won the Derby. Leave it to Mary to be around the winner . . .

Ballard MacDonald will do both shows (what do you mean both?) for Lew Brown . . . Mrs. Raloh Wonders says the report that she is putting herself back in circulation is a canard—and would you say so . . . Talk about sensayumas. At the approach to Lake Arlington, Vt., a sign reads: "Lake Arlington—Drive In!" . . . Local humor, wot? . . . Patricia Brooks, who will tour with the revived "Follies," hit the Irish Sweeps for 50 Gs and her first purchase was a sable coat. In this heat! . . . Jack Milliken is femaling Gloria Debevoise, both are young socialites. Young ones are harmless. . . . Joe Moss, the leader, is planning a local "gold coast" spot. . . . A Mr. Orlamond of H'wood says that sometime ago you recommended scrambled eggs with chopped scallions mixed in 'em—and you ended the line with "thank me." . . . He says: "Thanks."

There is a "Graphic" tabloid newspaper published regularly aboard E. F. Hutton's yacht, the news content of which concerns the guests. The editors of those ballyhoo mags would blush if they could read it . . . You boosted the fog number at the Riviera but you omitted the girl who does it, her name is Bee Kalmus and it's her first New York job . . . Give out a little! . . . Judy Malcolm, of the Paradise, lost her diamond ring while taking a bath. That's what happens when you take baths! . . . Anyway, her hotel ripped up floors (it went through the drain) but no go . . . Gracie Barrie and Jerry Arlen meet after the show each night under the "L" at 52nd St. to coodle and cuddle.

The Charles Lamonts, he's director of "Gigolette," anticipate a Walda or Walter . . . When you see dopes mixing brandy with water or anything

Green Room Gleanings: Although the Warners are keeping the details well under cover, there's a dramatic stock deal pending in the Davis . . . If the contemplated arrangement goes through, the Smithfield Street house will not be operated by the Warners, but will be put out on lease to the repertoire producers . . . George Jaffe's stock burlesque season in the Variety will get under way the Sunday midnight before Labor Day. . . . Ken Coffman, who has that Dillinger death mask, will go to work tomorrow as the art director of the Alvin Theater. . . . The Smithsonian Institution may take the Dillinger mask off Ken's hands after he has exhibited it at the Chicago Fair. . . . The Alvin management accepted the musicians' last proposal, but the Penn and Stanley turned it down, which leaves the movie house stage show question just about where it was. . . . However, the conferences are continuing. . . . George Shafer, the Pitt boss, has made no attempt to get together with the musicians, which strengthens the stock rumor for Penn avenue. . . . The price of pictures has taken such a sharp jump that Mr. Shafer is viewing the cost as practically prohibitive for the class of entertainment he puts on. . . . What has become of Pittsburgh's Eddie Quillian? . . . The censors haven't relented an inch in their stand against "Dr. Monica."

Judith Anderson pocketed $1,000, and expenses, for her week's work here in "The Female of the Species" . . . Miss Anderson fails to see Broadway possibilities in the death house melodrama which is sadly in need of one act of real action . . . Homestead's Frank McHugh is going to be a papa . . . There is no truth in that Fulton vaudeville rumor . . . Up to the moment, the movies have overlooked a plot along the lines of the Hoboken stamp collector, who sold his wife to her sweetie on the installment plan . . . How come? . . . Darryl Zanuck just back from Europe, says England regards the screen clean-up campaign as just as big a joke as prohibition . . . The Alvin will have a semi-private preview opening, Thursday night, August 30, with the house having its public premiere the next day . . . That Chaplin picture, which hasn't been titled according to the announcements, is likely to be called "Street Waif" . . . Bert Stern, United Artists exchange manager here, looked at "The Female of the Species" for the Shubert office . . . Add things to look forward to: Laurel and Hardy in "Babes in Toyland."

The Fim Daily says that Dick Powell's "Dames," due here soon, owes what success it achieves to the frolan comedy work of Hugh Herbert . . . The plot is the old familiar one about the poor boy who has written a show and can't find a producer . . . The exploitation of Shirley Temple has materially increased the deposits in that Santa Monica, Cal., bank, of which her father is branch manager . . . Henry B. Walthall's comeback is complete . . . The screen veteran has just signed a long-term contract with Fox . . . Nice little spot that Light House Inn, which has opened on the site of the world's first radio broadcasting station in Penn avenue . . . King Vidor is to direct Anna Sten and Gary Cooper in a Goldwyn film called "Broken Soul," a replacement for "Barbary Coast," which Sam shelved in face of the clean-up drive . . . Irene Dunne gets the lead in the screen version of "Sweet Adeline" . . . Ed Siegal, manager of the Etna Harris, postcards from Atlantic City that "Dames" is doing great in the resort city . . . The "extra" girl would have you know that Hollywood is the place where one man's yes is as good as another's! . . . It looks like a briskly competitive writer in Sixth street, what with the Penn, Alvin and Fulton marquees alight all in a row. . . . The "Frosty" Harrises (he's written gags for the Marx boys and other screen comedians) have arrived in their home town, Pittsburgh, from Hollywood, for an impending addition to the family.

All In A Day

By MARK SULLIVAN

Country Boy.

IF EVER a start was in the life of a single individual, this that now was Joe Gibbs. He emigrated practically his entire fortune to that one adventure. For more than 20 years, it was his only purpose of existence.

To understand the story of Joe Gibbs, it will be necessary for us to go back a good many years.

Joe's childhood conditions as described to a happy one. It was spent on a farm farm far up in New England.

When Joe was sixteen, his parents died. It was then that he went to work for Horatio Waite on a farm much like the one his parents had owned. This one was perhaps a trifle more barren. The work was a little harder.

As a reward for his labors, Joe received his board and room, plenty of abuse, and an occasional walloping when Horatio's temper was at its worst. It was during that time that Joe's hatred of Horatio developed, a hatred that was to influence his entire life.

There were times when he longed to run away. But he was afraid. So often had Horatio told him he was good-for-nothing and would never amount to anything, that Joe believed it himself.

He was twenty before he was driven to the point of rebellion. And then, having definitely made the break, he was terrified. The world outside the farm, of which he knew nothing, frightened him. But he shot his parting words at Horatio defiantly.

"You wait and see," he promised. "I'll come back here rich some day. I'll buy up this place, that's what I'll do."

The other man laughed loudly.

"You good-fer-nuthin' pup," he shouted. "There ain't no prospect of that!"

Joe trudged down the road with tears in his eyes. But something was burning inside him. Ambition. And a desire to make good his threat.

There were a few loafers at the depot to see him off.

"When you comin' back, Joe?" they called.

"When I'm rich and got enough money to buy out that old devil, I will, too. You'll see." He spoke earnestly. "I'm coming back some day."

Their laughter followed him.

"I'll show 'em," he repeated to himself. "I'll show 'em all."

He traveled a long distance in twenty years. From one farm to another. From there to a city. He saved practically every dollar he earned. He never spent a cent that wouldn't bring him two cents in return. He bought part ownership in a small business, and at the end of ten years, he owned the place outright.

It wasn't easy to pile up a fortune. Not the amount he wanted. He had to have enough money so that his offer for Horatio Waite's farm couldn't be refused.

He heard nothing from the old home town in all those 20 years. There wasn't room for making.

Joe Gibbs was 40 when the big day in his life arrived. He was rich, at least from the standpoint of the natives of his birthplace. He had enough money to buy the property he wanted, and he was an extremely happy man when he set out on his journey back home.

He was 40 and he looked 60. The years had taken a terrible toll.

The town was changed, of course. Joe hardly knew the place. There were buildings where there had been fields before, new apartment houses where there had been single dwellings. He was feverish with anxiety and fear when he stepped into the real estate office.

"The old Waite place," he quavered, "out on the River road. That still standing? I want to buy it if it is. I don't care how much. I want it."

The real estate man nodded. His face showed plainly that he considered Joe Gibbs a trifle daffy. The Waite place was run down, mortgaged to the hilt. Anybody who had a few thousands, though, was the answer to a real estate man's prayer. He began to hop around with the utmost speed.

"I guess I can get it for you," he stated. "I'll start looking up the title right away. Old Waite's dead, though, Joe. He died soon after you left town."

Joe was silent. So Horatio was gone. Well, it didn't matter. He'd have the farm, just as he had promised. It was his, at last. The years of sacrifice had ended in the fulfillment of his desire.

The real estate man came back some time later.

"Listen," he began, "this is a funny one. I remember it all now. When Waite died, he left that place to you. He hadn't anyone, you remember, and he must have got soft and wanted to make amends. The farm was sold by the State for taxes a couple of years later.

"Funny thing, your wanting to buy it now. It was yours if you could have been located 19 years ago."

New Sound For Alvin

When the new Harris Alvin theater opens August 31, there will be placed in operation the most modern and complete theater sound system in the Tri-state area, and the fifth of its type in the country. The system will include equipment for the reproduction of sound-on-film, and for amplifying the voices of actors on the stage, music from the orchestra, and the voice of an announcer.

The engineers who have been preparing this equipment to meet the special requirements of the Alvin explain that the term for the system, "high fidelity" means that sound is heard in the theatre just as perfectly natural and realistic as it was in the original.

The arrangement of loud speakers behind the screen in the Alvin was designed especially for this theater. There are eight units furnished to the huge steel frame that holds the screen. Six units are arranged in two tiers of three each, the upper tier pointed into the balcony and the lower tier pointed into the orchestra, for the purpose of giving uniform distribution of the wide range of tones emanating from the screen. The others take care of low-frequency tones.

Officials of the Harris Amusement Company, who will operate the Harris Alvin Theater, were among the first to install the newly developed sound apparatus back in 1929 when it was a newborn infant. Recognizing that the public is becoming more and more sound conscious, the Harris Amusement Company has taken special pride in the selection of this most modern perfected equipment for the Alvin, their new showplace.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS

By William J. Lewis

"The Rising Sun," by Keith Winter will be given its first of six nightly performances by the Pittsburgh Civic Playhouse in the annual school theater tonight, with a cast including Robert Hall, Dorothy Delle, Dr. Lois Chevalier, Ida Call, Howard Hoehn and Ruth McArdle. The occasion marks the first time the Playhouse will light five shows for weeks of drama in succession, the present one "we were hoping from the time we were hearing from the road to Sir Maurice Vyse" and "The People of the Specials." Following "The Rising Sun" there will remain on the bill but one more consecutive play, "The Dark Tree" that was of September 3.

The new dramatic season in New York has the nod to begin tonight, when activities on the Broadway stage will include the remainder of "Dodsworth," interrupted when the star Walter Huston took ill, to go to Central City, Col., to appear in the festival production of Othello. "Dodsworth," which became a hit following its premiere last February, is expected to attract sufficient new trade to the box office to keep the opening tonight will be a new Kaufman-Ferber play, with cast headed by Tom Powers, who has been the theater for several years, and including Edgar Nelson. Mr. Howard Lindsay is directing it. The new Shubert musical show, "Life Begins at 8:40," which has just completed two prosperous weeks in Detroit, will be seen in New York earlier than was originally intended. Rumors are afloat that Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller are to be married when their new picture is finished, and by present indications will open in New York next Monday.

8 YOUTHS SAVED AS BARGE CRASHES ROWBOAT

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Diary: Oil and sound the first trial machine since the Waldorf was finished. To breakfast with Verne Porter. All aglow over legal papers for the babe he has adopted. And spoke to a girl I thought was Myrna Dell, but accursed glue, very stuffy she was not.

At my sprawling and came upon an old letter Heublein wrote from New Orleans calling it the most romantic city outside of Venice ever visited. And a Yale alumni writes me Montmartre never learned any language by note and not even in his last days did he know conjunction, infinitive or ablative.

To dinner at Sands Point with the Arthur Samuels Roches, quartered in young Alfred Vanderbilt's house. Home by moonlight planning a garden of all white flowers for the home we are building in Gallipolis. And under our door a letter from Grace and Ed Nolan, whom we like so much.

Every Boston dog owner imagines his pet is by far the most intelligent. Out in Los Angeles, S. S. Hahn's Boston accompanied his master to a drug store, stole a rubber ball out of a basket to hide in the automobile. Next day, Sunday, he disappeared and was found hiding under a bench in church during services. Stealing on Saturday and repenting on Sunday, the rascal!

wrapped up in a few carefully timed moments. I saw one last evening, a pretty young thing with Katharine Hepburn bangs in evening wrap, moistening her lips, nervously clearing her throat and gazing hypnotically at a song she must know by heart. A page boy opens the door quickly, holds a hand up. Her time has come! A faint grateful smile and she hurries out quickly to keep her appointment—with America!

New York friends of George Creel are interested in his California gubernatorial race. This recent ambition is another sudden soar in a many-sided, restless career. With the springy gait of a roulette ball and a mind as darting as the otter, he has filled more roles than almost any writing man of his time. Born on a Missouri farm, he edited a half dozen newspapers, was police commissioner in Denver for a hectic period, globe trotted extensively, has written a dozen books and is, of course, best known in his public information post during the war. His wife is the well known actress Blanche Bates. And he's a fair ringer for the ex-King of Spain.

Baird Leonard's polite peccavi that it takes all sorts to make New York is supported by the Beekman place bachelor whose wealth has only one extravagant off-shoot. In his comparatively modest apartment he has a fully equipped two-chair barber shop with competent barbers on duty from noon until 8. These special tonsorial ministrations are for friends who, after a tough day at the office, drop in for a cocktail and are freshened into a well-barbered glow. A visitor caught tipping is not asked again.

One of New York's most indefatigable patrons of the cafes and first nights is Ralph B. Strassburger who has never succumbed to the dinner jacket or full dress. His invariable costume is a plain blue serge with white starched collars. George White, until a year or so ago, was a blue sergist and white collarist at every event, his tie a fly-speck black bow. The late Willie Vanderbilt was another who never wore a colored shirt or collar. Also Charles Butterworth. All in white!

Basil Woon ghost wrote four biographies in one year . . . Roger Wolfe Kahn plays 14 musical instruments . . . The Irvin Cobbs, having bought Greta Garbo's home at Santa Monica, will spend six months in California and six months in New York.

Not for years have I felt so completely out of the picture. At a dinner this evening there didn't seem to be a soul, save my wife and I, who were not strong in a determination to have a nervous breakdown. We seemed quite robust and forlorn.

AUTO KILLS BOY HITCH-HIKING TO HOME

Woman's Leg Broken; Girl's Eye Injured In Collision

A Bellaire (O.) youth, hitchhiking home from a ball game here, was killed and several other persons injured in automobile accidents over the week-end.

William Jellison, 17, of R. D. No. 3, Bellaire, was fatally injured when he was struck by an auto while riding on the running board of another car, the morgue reported.

After attending a baseball game here Saturday, he started for his home with John Dilioreta, 1633 Main street, Wellsville, O. They were given a ride by T. H. Fitzpatrick, 614 West Elizabeth.

At the intersection of routes 22 and 30 at Imperial a car driven by John W. Stokes, 7318 Woodlawn avenue, sideswiped the Fitzpatrick machine and struck Jellison.

Taken to Mercy Hospital early yesterday, he died several hours later of a fractured skull and pelvic injury. His body was identified at the morgue last night by his mother, Mrs. Edna Jellison, of 1708 Commerce street, Wellsville. She said he lived with his grandmother but had been visiting her for the last three months and last Friday told her he was going to a ball game in Pittsburgh.

Drivers of both autos were ordered to post bond before the Coroner.

The victim, Mrs. Rachel Chalfonte, of 7419 Frankstown avenue, was hit by a machine driven, police said, by Joseph Nove, 21, of 1320 Collier street. Her condition was reported as good at Pittsburgh Hospital.

Helen Giganti, 23, of No. 1 Townsend street, suffered an eye injury early today in a collision between two autos at William Penn way and Seventh avenue. She was riding with Joseph Grossi, 25, of 1111 Gilmore way. The other driver was Dorothy Cohen, 304 Charles street, New Kensington.

Struck by the bumper of an auto being backed up at Fifth avenue and William Penn way, Mrs. Harriet Kennedy, 51, of 84 Crawford street, suffered injuries to her knees and fingers. The car was driven by Eleanor Steele, 23, of 1703 Potomac avenue, police reported.

Another pedestrian was injured in a collision between two cars at Liberty and Seventh avenues. Roy McKee, 33, no home, was treated at Mercy Hospital for shock suffered when the autos of George B. Parker, 20, of 986 Greentree road, and Carl Sarver, R. D. No. 7, Perrysville, collided.

3,000 SIGN TUBE TOLL PROTEST

Petitions signed by 3,000 Mt. Lebanon taxpayers protesting against suggested tolls on the Liberty Tunnels will be offered at the meeting of the Mt. Lebanon Board of Commissioners tonight, when the board will be asked to announce its position in the toll method of liquidating the cost of tunnel improvements.

The Commissioners have avoided official action on the question, D. W. Baker, an official of the South Hills Civic Federation, announced. Signatures on similar petitions are being secured in other South Hills communities, according to the federation.

Youthful Swimmer Injured in Pool

Patrick McGuire, 12, of 6645 Hedge street, was injured while swimming in Paulson avenue swimming pool yesterday when he bumped his head against the side of the pool. He was treated at Pittsburgh Hospital.

ARSON CHARGED IN STORE FIRE

Several hours after an explosion and fire in his store at 4533 Chatsworth avenue, Hazelwood, Mike Gonnie was arrested in his home at 4529 Irvine street yesterday on a charge of arson, according to Oakland police.

Police and firemen reported finding nearly 50 feet of fuse attached to two 10-gallon wooden barrels. Fluid in the barrels was to be tested by the Bureau of Mines today to determine if it was combustible.

Dynamite had been placed in the store, police said. Damage was estimated at $1,500.

Damages estimated at $2,000 was caused by fire of unknown origin in a three-story building at 925 Federal street, North Side, yesterday, police reported.

GIRL SEES BOY SHE JILTED DIE

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Gerald Trueblood, 18, of Portland, Ind., died this morning of poison which police said he took before the eyes of his high school sweetheart, who had refused to marry him.

Trueblood came to Detroit yesterday to see Miss Anna Reeves, 18, also of Portland, who had been visiting relatives here.

Lieut. John Whitman, of the police homicide squad, quoted her as saying they drove around the city together all Sunday evening, Trueblood asking her to marry him, as he had done several times before. She refused.

During the early morning hours, the girl told police, Trueblood stopped the car, pulled a bottle from his pocket, drank the contents and collapsed.

Miss Reeves' screams brought help from a passing motorist, who took them to receiving hospital, where the boy died.

OHIOAN ADMITS KILLING WOMAN

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Prosecutors today molded a case against Arthur C. Wilson, 30-year-old Cleveland steel chemist, charged with the murder of Mrs. Irene De Bolt, wealthy Cleveland widow, whose nude body was found on a desert near Van Horn, Tex., last November.

Brought back here from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where he was arrested, there was a possibility that Wilson would be tried in Fort Worth, Tex. A statement attributed to Wilson by Ray Jackson, district attorney, and Sheriff Albert Anderson said he killed Mrs. De Bolt at Fort Worth and drove hundreds of miles across the state to Van Horn, where he left the body.

Wilson, when interviewed by an El Paso Times reporter in the presence of officers, told how he killed Mrs. De Bolt after a long series of petty quarrels. He said Mrs. De Bolt struck him at Fort Worth and he seized an iron and hit her.

SLAP ON WRIST FOILS HOLDUP

BALTIMORE, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Miss Lula Hammel, cashier at a local movie, didn't have time to say "naughty, naughty," but a slap on the wrist was effective in getting a thief to flee.

While counting money in her ticket booth last night, Miss Hammel saw a hand slip stealthily toward a pile of bills.

She administered a hearty slap. The hand quickly disappeared and its owner fled west, followed by the movie manager.

Three men stopped the fleeing man. At police headquarters he was charged with the attempted larceny of $150. He identified himself as William Fox, 35.

The holdup men fled in an automobile.

Thieves entered the Royal Baking Company plant at 7504 Felicia way over the weekend and stole office equipment valued at $125, police reported. Entrance was gained by removing a pane from a rear window to the office.

HALLETTSVILLE, Tex., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Authorities claimed an "open and shut" case today against Frank Wick, 27-year-old Army deserter, in the slaying of Mrs. Clara Ploeger, 40, wealthy Yoakum (Tex.) widow.

RIVER CAPTAIN SENDS CREW TO RESCUE

Boys Narrowly Escape Death 'Riding Waves' In Darkness

Eight youths, who were "riding the waves" of a steamer, narrowly escaped drowning last night when their rowboat was struck by several barges of another steamer near Glenfield Bridge on the Monongahela River.

Only the quick action of Capt. J. H. Hanna, master of the steamer William Larimer Jones, and several of his crew, saved the youths from drowning.

Capt. Hanna ordered a boat lowered into the river when the barges of his steamer struck the youths' rowboat. Some of the boys, good swimmers, reached the barges themselves after they were thrown or had jumped into the river.

STRUGGLE IN WATER

The others were struggling in the water when they were rescued by the crew. One Mike Kunack, 15, of 73 Renova street, was picked out of the water after he appeared helpless. He was later taken to Montefiore Hospital, suffering from shock police said.

The others rescued were from the Hazelwood district.

They included Walter Wolgorek, 12, of 5624 Herbert way; Charles Popp, 14, of 68 Renova street; Joseph Popp, 11, of 5618 Second avenue; Carl Popp, 14, of 74 Renova street; Stephen Vas, 15, of 5624 Second avenue; James Smide, 13, of 18 Renova street, and Albert Bodack, 11, of 17 Renova street. The Popp boys are cousins, police said.

DARKNESS DESCENDS

Darkness had descended on the river, according to police as the boys rowed close to the steamer Monongahela, proceeding south. They approached the side of the steamer and started to "ride the waves." After a while, they dropped back a short distance.

Coming toward them, in the same direction, was the William Larimer Jones, owned by the Vesta Coal Company. It was pushing six empty barges.

According to company officials, the darkness prevented the rowboat from being seen. The barges struck it and overturned it as the youths suddenly realized their plight.

After the rescue, Capt. Hanna reported the details to his office and then proceeded up the river to Monongahela City.

DOUBT MURDER ON 'DEATH RIDE'

Believed at first to have been murdered, William Monaghan, 50, employed in the Waverly Oil Company plant in Fifty-fourth street, died after being struck by an automobile while lying on the curb in the belief of Homicide Detectives Robert Carroll and Thomas Mulvihill.

The detectives said Monaghan had been drinking in a restaurant in Butler street. A young woman told them she left with him and he fell over in the street. She then continued home, she said.

It was first believed Monaghan was slain after being robbed of his pay by being lured into an automobile.

James Rasbridge, 26, and John Linn, 23, of 178 Forty-second street, were held in connection with the death. They denied their automobile struck Monaghan. Both were arrested after Guy Hall, of 4621 Butler street, said he saw Monaghan being dragged to the curb shortly after their car had driven into Home street, near Butler street.

With Gold, Silver Out, U. S. Might Try Scrap Iron Next

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Now that we have made a national profit out of gold and silver we might see what we can do with scrap iron.

The public debt hopped a fraction to twenty-seven billion dollars in cash prizes. Our assets are 48 states, five Great Lakes and the New York City skyline.

Twenty-seven billion is what we would call fancy figure skating.

With school soon to start we hope the teachers will not waste the children's time by teaching them subtraction.

Just give 'em addition and multiplication and start 'em out to be the greatest treasurers of the U. S. since Alexander Hamilton.

Now that society's weddings seem to be over for a little while with Elizabeth Chesterman's on Saturday being the final one of note, there is time to turn to those roaming souls who have been attending themselves during the summer at this and that resort, and those who have been taking frequent short trips to New York or the South.

The George W. Crawfords, of Pittsburgh, have been very active in resort life this year as usual, and Mrs. Crawford was feted at a birthday dinner at White Sulphur Springs Friday night given by her mother, Mrs. Robert N. Warnock, of New York. The party took place on the Greenbrier Terrace and there were about 50 guests. The Tristram C. Colketts, of Philadelphia, who have been houseguests of the Crawfords, attended the celebration.

MRS. GEORGE W. CRAWFORD

Also at White Sulphur are Judge and Mrs. Thomas M. Marshall, who have taken a cottage in Florida Row for two weeks. Mrs. Marshall, before her recent marriage, was Helen Brennan, daughter of Mrs. John Brennan, of Pittsburgh, you'll recall.

Mrs. Eugene H. Pargny and the Joseph Van Arkersons arrived at the same popular place on Thursday.

Mrs. Francis S. Guthrie Stops in New York City

Mrs. Francis Sellers Guthrie, of Beechwood boulevard, stopped at the Hotel New Weston, New York, on Thursday, as did the LeRoy B. Mitchells.

The Alan Magee Scalfes, who have been stopping at the Waldorf - Astoria, New York, have returned to Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Moses B. Suydam and Peggy Suydam have just arrived at the Weylin Hotel.

And then there is another addition to the going-to-college-in-the-fall group — Elisa Pierce, the J. Audley Pierces' daughter, of McKeesport boulevard. She will enter Vassar in September, leaving here about the twentieth of the month.

Back soon from the Pathfinders' Lodge, Cooperstown, N. Y., will come young Jean Eddy, daughter of Mrs. Thomas H. Eddy, of Squirrel Hill avenue, and Saturday the junior Julian Kennedys will motor to the same camp to bring their three daughters, Margaret, Elizabeth and Charlotte, and their son, Julian III, who has been at Hyde Bay on the lake front for the summer.

George O. Challinor, Jr., Spending Month at Point Chautauqua

Mrs. J. L. Wilson and John W. Wilson, of Pittsburgh, were among those who attended the International tennis tournament at the Seigniory Club, Province of Quebec, Canada, the week end of August 14.

News of the Pittsburgh colony at Watch Hill, R. I., states that Cully Darlington, young son of Mrs. Harry Darlington, was again winner in the weekly race for Alden boats, with Billie Moorehead, Jr., of Pittsburgh, coming in third.

Mountain Vacation Ended

By MRS. CHARLES M. BRIGG

Two Mt. Lebanon Woman's Club members had an unusually interesting vacation. Mrs. M. Lee Gardner and Mrs. W. K. Bixp, motored to Minnewaska Lake in the Shawangunk Mountains, New York, where they were guests at Wildmere Hotel. The resort is the gathering place of Quakers, was founded by Quakers 60 years ago, and is today managed by their descendants who maintain the old traditions. Motor cars drive up to the hotels, but are taken by chauffeurs to outside garages, the guests traveling the beautiful mountain and lakeside roads in carriages or on foot. Cards and dancing are, of course, taboo. For generations the same families of New York's most exclusive set have summered there.

Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. Estep and Mrs. John Phillips, of Clairton, gave recitals for three days, both morning and evening, in the Windmere and at Cliff House. They were accompanied by Mrs. Charles Kingsley, of Clairton. Mrs. Gardner, by the way, is the new program chairman for the Mt. Lebanon Club's music department.

Mrs. W. H. Kramer, vice chairman of the music department, is at Sparrow Lake, Ontario, accompanied by her children, Donald and Jane Kramer. Another member, Mrs. H. J. Kreiling, and her family are at Sparrow Lake for a week's visit and will later motor to other Canadian resorts. Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Alexander are also at the lake.

Mrs. Harold T. Hanson, retiring president of the club, and her children, Harold and Belle, are spending August at the summer home of Mrs. Hanson's sister, Mrs. Lawrence Bristol, Shelter Island, Long Island. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Nicklas, Jr. (Mrs. Nicklas is a past president) and their daughters, Virginia and Nancy Lee, are at Conneaut Lake, where they have a cottage for the summer.

Pittsburgh Folks Visit Cape May

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chambers, of Westminster place, accompanied by Miss Florence Allison, of Roslyn place, left Saturday by motor for Cape May, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Chambers are to be members of a house party being entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ryan and Miss Allison will visit Mrs. Mary Verner, who also has a cottage at the Cape.

Arline Horner, Harry Lang Engaged

On Saturday afternoon in her home in Forbes Terrace, Mrs. Charles R. Hanks entertained with a bridge luncheon in honor of her niece, Miss Arline D. Horner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Horner, of West Monterey, at which announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Horner to Harry F. Lang, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Haggard, of Kinmaid street.

There were 21 guests and decorations were in green and white. The mother of the bride was here for the party, and her sister, Mrs. F. A. Lanson, of Boston, Mass., and a cousin, Miss Elizabeth Buzard, were here.

Miss Horner is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and a member of Kappa Alpha Phi sorority.

North Side Girl Weds in Light Of Candles

By candlelight the wedding of Miss Sarah Smith and Herbert R. Gildersleeve, Jr., took place Saturday night at 8:30 o'clock in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fred C. Smith, McClure avenue, North Side, the Rev. J. Norman Hunter officiating. The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Karl W. Smith, wore a princess gown of white satin with a slight train and having small satin buttons to the waist where a wide satin bow was a part of the gown itself. Her bouquet was a shower of white roses and lilies of the valley.

A sister, Miss Elizabeth A. Smith, the bride's only attendant, wore beige satin made on lines somewhat similar to the bridal gown. She carried an arm bouquet of garden flowers. Mr. Gildersleeve, who is a son of Herbert R. Gildersleeve, of Oakmont, was attended by his brother, Kirk Gildersleeve. Miss Esther Kastner played the wedding music.

The house was beautifully decorated with summer flowers and the bridal party stood against a background of palms and ferns with brass candelabra at either side. After a honeymoon at Bermonier, Mr. and Mrs. Gildersleeve will make their home with Mrs. Smith.

Jewish Group In Movie Fight

The board of directors of the National Council of Jewish Women has voted to ally itself with religious bodies working toward the elimination of objectionable films. Through this action the National Council pledges 40,000 members in 200 sections throughout the country to aid Protestant, Catholic and Jewish organizations in the fight for cleaner movies.

Believing that in the last analysis the public decides and that no super-imposed or private agency can effect the necessary reforms, Mrs. Arthur Brin, of Minneapolis, national president, emphasizes that council is not striving to censor the movies.

The hope is, Mrs. Brin states, that out of all the agitation for clean pictures will come to the producers a realization of the importance of respecting the canons of good taste, and that motion picture audiences will support more enthusiastically those excellent pictures which demand intelligence and appreciation. Because the vast majority of council's membership is composed of mothers, the organization is particularly concerned with any action taken in relation to young and impressionable children on whom motion pictures make a profound impression.

The better films committee of Pittsburgh section, of which Mrs. Nathan Jacobs is chairman, will co-operate with the local organizations furthering the campaign in Pittsburgh.

Kappa Phi Group To Have Retreat

Kappa Phi, Methodist organization of the University of Pittsburgh, Frick Training School and Carnegie Institute of Technology will conduct its annual retreat September 7, 8 and 9 at the Epworth Woods. Plans for the retreat as well as for the coming year were discussed at a cabinet meeting in the home of the president, Miss Helen Shaner, Chartiers avenue.

Miss Ella Vogel Attends Outing

Miss Ella King Vogel, of Pittsburgh, was one of several members of the Pennsylvania Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club who motored to Wheeling, W. Va., on Saturday to attend the annual outing of the West Virginia Federation at Ogleby Park.

Miss Vogel was the week-end guest of Miss Isabelle Claridge, of Wheeling, president of the federation.

THROUGH THE SPYGLASS

Viewing the New

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6200 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

Discovery! At last a cocktail or canape plate that won't use up all the rent money! We found beautiful emerald, amethyst, and sapphire glass plates that (while they're not really for cocktail use) will make the most ideal ones we've ever seen!

Round . . with a little "ear" at either side . . the better to hold on to them as you meander 'round the room sipping! Only 29c, too . . quite a difference from the sums the so-called "canape" plate usually asks!

Sample ones that eye never before saw for such a sum at $1.65 the pair! Gloves that rest $4 to $6.50 formerly! Gloves that are absolutely unbeatable as values . . as smartsters . . as suited to every occasion that Fall's calendar shows! Of course, there are not all colors in all sizes, but there ARE all colors in the lot. In four . . six . . eight . . twelve . . and sixteen-button lengths. And when you stop to think of the usual price of, say, a 16-button pair of black suede gloves that you can wear with black velvets this Fall—well, chee-ildren, you're doing exceedingly well to grab off at least TWO pairs of these now!

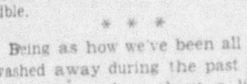
We suppose you realize it . . . but just "in case" . . know ye that all odds and ends of summer furniture are being sold out for next-to-nothing now. Not only the types that you HAVE to use on the lawn . . . but others as well, that will look very nicely in a sun room or living room . . . or even the children's room this fall and winter.



Particularly little coffee tables. Very few of course . . . but smart ones. Like a white wrought iron with tile top . . . and a split bamboo with handles to pick it up at the sides . . . and others of painted metal. As we said . . . only a few . . and they may even be gone by the time you get there (we can't vouch for who may grab what before this gets to press!) But worth seeing, if possible.

Being as how we've been all but washed away during the past two weeks . . . how about a little getting-our-heads-together on the subject of raincoats! For no longer are raincoats things just to keep off the wet! Today's collection is made up of seersucker ones—as gaily striped or checked, or glistering white as the seersucker frocks you wore all summer. And crepe de chine raincoats in colors . . . soft, lightweight, silky, and just as waterproof as the proverbial "duck's back!" Of poplin in dark shades . . . of English broadcloth . . . in plains, checks, polka dots, stripes and plaids!

And even the silvery ones like a piece of "blimp!" Rubberized aluminum . . . bakelite treated cloth that is as light, and a gleaming silver as its ancestor! Very nice raincoats, these. Prices $5.95 to $10.95. Sizes 12 to 20.

Item: Pottery bud vases—at 19 cents each . . . in all colors and shapes . . . are nice and neat . . . to give . . . as bridge prizes (one to a table)!

Prehistoric Fish Hunted by Museum

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—(INS.)—Prof. E. C. Case, director of the University of Michigan museum of paleontology, is planning an expedition to points in the northern portion of the Lower Michigan Peninsula to hunt for the fossil remains of the great armored fish which swam in the seas that covered Michigan many millions of years ago.

STREET FROCKS WITH A TOUCH OF FUR

By PRUDENCE PENNY

LOTS OF WOMEN, especially the distinctive ones, don't get much of a kick out of the streets and cities. For them are the conventional frocks that are crammed nightly with bits of fur and which, with the proper gloves, hat, shoes and bag, will make elegant street ensembles a little later on, come early frosts.

IT MUST BE taken for granted that those whoses for whom we are providing practical advice like their things a bit flattering, for that is the way our fur trimmed gowns are headed just now. We have the toque knack effect, with a bit of astrakhan or astrakhan bordering its revision somewhere; we have cartridge pleat details up pockets—and Russian satin or comparable satin or leather elsewhere on the model to back up the accent. Sleeves detach, and we have many types of bloused-on skirts and cuffs of ermine and moleskin.

WOMEN WHO ARE always on the move for looks which they can get on by the morning and wrong appointments or theater after their dress dressing will get a lot of satisfaction out of this month's dress. For example: There's a dandy for afternoon light and chic for a season of outdoor, and is entirely on the particular to have on hand for everyday wear as suggested ends. Contrasted satin shoes, brown, navy, green and tan, dress are suggested as well. Complements for elsewise is three more colors. It is an easy recipe for being well-dressed.

Note the cowl neck on this two-piece brown sheer wool frock. It is especially good with the drop shoulder yoke, which is accented with broad kolinsky edgings. The skirt is slim and slightly belled at the hem. The belt on the peplum blouse is buckled with yellow gold metal.

Center, a wool frock in the new shade of green, rich and dark, which has a draped cowl neckline involved with a self-material bow bordered with black astrakhan fur. The big sleeves are pouched attractively at the elbow, and the peasant cut over the shoulders is both flattering and comfortable.

Copper wool is used for this exceptionally graceful autumn frock. The skirt has two stitched folds down the center back to match those in front, so that the costume looks like a long top coat over a matching frock. Sable type fur edges the jabot collar which is tied with a cord of self-material ending in gold balls. Note the perfectly plain, wide sleeve.

Father Finds Girls Lost 25 Years

DENVER, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Charles Plummer, 65, San Diego, Cal., says he has found two daughters he and Mrs. Plummer had sought for nearly 25 years.

They now are living in Wyoming, he said. One is Mrs. John Pluemel, 25, Granger, and the other Mrs. Dalton Spencer, 23, Evanston.

Plummer said he and his wife, now 60, were married in St. Louis during the 1904 World's Fair. Florence, Now Mrs. Spencer, was born in San Diego and Margaret in Salt Lake City. Business conditions, he said, forced he and his wife to go to El Paso and they left the children in Salt Lake City in care of a nurse, whose name he does not recall.

Later they wrote the nurse to send them the children but received no reply, Plummer said. A search was started which ended only this week.

Austere Lines in Modish Shirtwaist Frocks

By DOROTHY ROE

Universal Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—"That simple little shirtwaist dress" may appear this season in anything from satin to sequins.

The knowing designers have discovered that it's highly amusing to present innocent, schoolgirlish styles in the most sophisticated and luxurious fabrics.

And women have discovered that their vampire voltage goes up at least 100 per cent when they wear seemingly ingenuous frocks in wicked materials.

It's the old principle of the excessively feminine girl who knows that her dimpled charms are heightened to the masculine eye by severely tailored lines. She is completely aware that her attempt at mannish clothes merely makes the obtuse male chuckle fondly:

"Bless her little heart! She probably thinks she looks like a boy—so if she could!"

So we see the austere lines of the shirtwaist frock this season in such heretofore unheard-of fabrics as lustrous satin, rich metal-shot silks and mossy velvets that look like wool.

The mannish turnover collar is still present. So are the long sleeves and linked cuffs. So are the belted waist and slim, straight skirt.

But the cuff links and buttons may be jeweled and the belt may tie with a tassel of fur.

The dress itself may be fashioned of slithery, shiny metal cloth that in other days wouldn't have dared show itself before dark.

RECIPES FOR INGENIOUS USES OF ACCUSTOMED FOODS

By PRUDENCE PENNY

Spicy pear tarts! What could be nicer? They sound very good, don't they? And Cantaloupe Custard and Marmalade Pudding. You see what happens to people who think up new uses for accustomed foods? They get prizes for their ingenuity and thoughtfulness in sharing these unusual recipes with their neighbors through this column.

Now, who ever would have thought of using those tasty little pears in tarts? Or cooking cantaloupe into a custard? As for putting marmalade in a pudding . . . Well, it just goes to show. The old adage that there's "nothing new under the sun" can't be true. It seems to be disproved constantly by the prize-winning recipes in this column.

Not every day, you understand. A recipe does not need to be a new or original one to successfully compete for a prize. By no means. Old friends are often best, and some of the oldest and best recipes have been handed down by word of mouth from generation to generation without ever being written down for others to share. If you have one of these old treasures tucked away in the back of your head, drag it out and send it in to Prudence Penny. Here are today's prize-winning recipes:

Anna Sten Opposed to Sexy Gowns

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Anna Sten says it's a woman's duty to look when she does not attempt to be well as a woman. For blonde Russian movie actress said today:

"Feminists—yes, if you wish—don't go over to a woman working for a living—it's a distraction."

She criticized modern designers of women's clothes as over-emphasizing sex appeal.

"I think designers should not spend their time thinking up creations that do nothing but expose a girl's figure. There are many beautiful dresses and costumes that could be made without accenting a woman's sex.

"If she is a charming woman, the fact will be known even though she is clothed in burlap sacks."

Miss Sten looks upon the modern woman primarily as a worker —a "fighter in the battle for existence," as she puts it, especially.

"Men and women should be able to work beside each other, unconscious of the fact that they are men and women, but thinking only of their work."

She Brags to Him About Other Boy Friends

She's always bragging about three other fellows who are in love with her. . . . She quarrels with him. . . . And they have reduced their dates from three to one a week. . . . So "Friday the Thirteenth" asks for advice.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a boy of 20 and in love with a girl of the same age. We have been friends for four years. She is always bragging about the three other fellows who are in love with her and then she always ends it with the query of whether I love her or not. Sometimes I tell her yes and sometimes "no."

Miss Brunot

We have had a few quarrels. I have met all her family, except her parents, who do not want her to go with me as they do not think me good enough for her.

In the last month she has avoided seeing me as often as possible. Our dates have been reduced from three a week to one. At present we have just got over one of our quarrels.

I do not have a job, but do my best to entertain her. I never go out with her unless I have an automobile. Advise me what to do. Miss Brunot.

FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH.

You must believe you are ill-omened, or why such a signature? No doubt the girl plays up the three suitors in order that you declare yourself. Although before you do so have a job and know her parents.

If I were a young man, I would not be too eager about a girl who bragged too much, and whose parents do not like me. Also it never is wise to pose as being better off than you are, such as having a car to take your girl out in, and when without work. . . . So maybe after all you BRAG too . . . brother . . . but abstractly.

MOTHER LIKES HIM

Dear Miss Brunot:

I followed your advice the first time I wrote, and it turned out all right. I am 19, and have been going with a boy of a different religion since last summer. I seem to like him. And still am with him occasionally. My parents gave me permission to have boy friends at home, but this fellow has never asked to call at my place.

My mother met him one evening, however, and she liked him. But my brothers and sisters do not seem to care for him. I would go steadily with him, if he would only ask me.

His manners are better than the other fellows I know, and he doesn't seem to have any other girl. Kindly advise. JR. 35.

I am afraid, sister, you'll have to wait for this young man to prove himself more attentive. Of course, you can invite him to your home. That is your privilege.

I too, agree that I like good manners in a fellow like you say this one has. One cannot always please all their brothers and sisters where a beau is concerned and if your mother likes him, he must be O. K.

SPEAK UP, WILLIAM

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been going with a girl for four years. At first I did not care so much, but now I find I do. She has often said she loved me, but I have not declared myself so fervently. Lately, however, she has grown cold. She even has asked me if I should like to see her happily married. I did not answer her. She seems so different from what she was. I'd rather die than give her up. So tell me what to do. WILLIAM.

The girl may wonder why you don't ask her, in plain words, to be your wife, and that may be why she questioned you whether you'd like to see her happily married. It may have been her way of opening up the avenue of approach for you.

Four years is a good while to keep a girl guessing. . . . I believe she still cares, but is worried for fear you are not serious. . . . Ask her plainly to marry you, and see what she says.

QUITS SPEAKING

Angel Cake says he has been going with a girl for 10 months, and all of a sudden she won't even SPEAK to him. . . . And she tells her friends she HATES him. . . . Is it true, he wants to know, that one can learn to dislike another, and at such SHORT NOTICE?

It does seem strange, after the 10 months' friendship, to turn-about-face so rapidly. Maybe she has more reasons, Angel Cake, than you admit. . . . Think over carefully all that has happened.

However, if you have erred not at all, then try and forget a girl who is so notionate . . .

MAN READS COLUMN

Here is a commercial traveler, who approves thoroughly of the Speak Up Sisters Column.

Dear Miss Brunot:

Kindly permit me to offer sincere congratulations on your intelligent advice. You so willing and freely give it when asked. No, I have no problems of my own in mind. I am a commercial traveler, have been for 14 years and am still quite young. I have had plenty of honest-to-goodness parties, hot ones, maybe. But now I am married and to the finest woman imaginable. I have a sweet little girl 4 years old.

The very fact your work has been so educational to me, has prompted me to write this letter.

C. W. W.

Thank you, Mr. Commercial Traveler.

FAY KING WISHES BOSSES WOULD GIVE CREDIT TO DESERVING EMPLOYES

The leader of an orchestra is much like the boss in other lines. Only bosses in business are not so quick to express appreciation of those who work well under their leadership.

This thought came to me when I had expressed my pleasure and praise of their melodious music to Archie Bleyer, leader of a New York hotel dance orchestra.

He at once said how pleased "the boys" would be, and gave all credit to his musicians, though he had also played the piano and trombone, as well as directed.

If all bosses were as modest and generous in giving credit to those who do good work for them, it seems every office might be as harmonious as the music played by Archie Bleyer's orchestra.

Lillian Tells Suspicions of 'Snooper'

The grin which my petulance concerning her reference to Avis Arlen had called forth faded from Lillian's face as I asked her what she thought Samuel Brixton was trying to do.

"The devil, who is his patron saint, only knows, and he won't tell," she said. "Of course I may be mistaken, but I'm practically certain that he was the 'snooper' on the nursery balcony this morning, when we were talking about Lee Chow and Marion's birthday and the opening of that lock box. And when I ran across him in the hall this morning, he was draped over the stair rail in what was distinctly a listening attitude.

"When he saw me he proffered a lame explanation of wanting to hear if there were any breakfast sounds from the kitchen whereupon I told him that all breakfasts were to be served in the rooms, to make it easier for Katie, and that he could have his at any time he wished.

'SNOOPER'S EXCUSE

"I think that flabbergasted him. He hastily disclaimed any hunger, and said he only wanted to make sure that he and Helena wouldn't be late for the meal and put us out. As I never knew Sam Brixton to be solicitous for anyone's comfort save his own, Helena's and the children's, I took his disclaimer with more than the proverbial salty grain, but pretended to believe him. I asked him if Helena were awake, and he said 'No.' Then I trumped his ace by telling him that, if he would waken her, I could send their trays up within a few minutes.

"There was only one thing he could answer to that," she went on with a reminiscently malicious little grin, "and he said it. He declared vehemently that he wouldn't think of waking Helena, and he dragged in her hypothetical headache of which he made use early this morning. He said that he would wait until she wakened before telling us that they wished breakfast. Then he scuttled back to their room and I haven't seen him since, although I'm sure he has his ear glued to the keyhole, the villainous old snooper."

"Is it true, as your story sounds, that he didn't show confusion about the episode of this morning, when you accused him of being on the balcony?"

"If you had any real acquaintance with Sam Brixton, you would know that he didn't turn a hair," she answered. "He is the most colossal bluffer I have ever known. His attitude to me a little while ago was that of a man saying, 'You have had time to think things over, and you of course realize how you have misjudged me, so we will say no more about it. I forgive you freely.' If he had shouted those very words, he could not have made his meaning clearer."

A tattoo on the door interrupted her, and we looked at each other with indulgent smiles. We both recognized those excited yet timorous raps, and Lillian, rising, threw at me an imperative, "Sit still! I'll let them in. I have to go, anyway," as she went to the door.

"Is Mums here?" Junior asked as she opened the door, and at her assent he and Roderick came into the room slowly and a bit shamefacedly. Lillian closed the door quickly after her, and left the two small boys looking uncertainly at me.

'SINNERS' ARRIVE

I knew very well the reason for their coming to me, and I fought to keep my lips from twitching as I looked at them. At the time when I found them in the glade there had been no time for questioning, so rapid and hectic had been the happenings there, but they knew that they had sinned grievously against the rules of their code, and they evidently were coming to see what was expected of them in the way of expiation.

If discipline were to be maintained, I knew that I must let no hint of amusement mar the austerity with which they patently expected me to listen to them. But it was hard not to sweep them both up into my arms as they faced me so sturdily, yet with such abashed faces.

"Mums," Junior began, then gulped painfully and shot an appealing glance at Roderick.

"You see, Auntie Madge," Roderick said, and then stopped as abruptly as Junior had done, and with as much evident discomfort.

"Would it help you any," I asked them slowly, "to tell you I know why you have come here?"

"You mean," Junior asked breathlessly, "that you know why we went away this morning? How could you? Even Bill and Hank didn't know why?"

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Calling a Spade a Diamond

[This is one of a series of articles in which Mrs. Culbertson explains certain principles of the new Culbertson System of Play. The examples and rules given by Mrs. Culbertson in these articles have never been published heretofore and are exclusive in Pittsburgh with the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.]

In science it is now recognized that pragmatic truth—that is, a near enough approach to truth to permit of practical results—is largely a matter of terminology. Nobody, the last I heard of the matter, had seen an atom or an electron. Yet by thinking in terms of such hypothetical entites the scientists have so stimulated invention as to bring about television and technocracy.

Mrs. Culbertson

In Bridge, I am a pragmatist, and I believe in the importance of terminology. A low trump may not be a super-Ace in another suit, and a combination such as Spades x Diamonds K Q may not constitute a diamond tenance, but the player who occasionally thinks of them as such and finesses accordingly will often get better results than the one who refuses to call a spade anything but a spade.

South, Dealer.

	♠ J8753 ♡ 85 ◇ 6 ♣ AJ1042
	♠ KQ1092 ♡ AKJ ◇ KQJ54 ♣ —

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South was quite unfortunate in the bidding, since the 1½ honor-tricks North needed for his double raise happened to be in the one suit in which they could do South no good. But the law of compensation provided some balm for this duplication of values when West opened the club King, hoping to establish a trick in that suit before his Ace of diamonds was gone. The first trick was won by Dummy's club Ace, and South had to be very careful in discarding. The heart Jack had to be saved, for it was the sole hope of making the contract, so South discarded a diamond. After winning the first trick, Dummy led a heart and South boldly finessed the Jack, which won because the gods of chance had placed the Queen with East. Now the Ace and King of hearts were led and South, with a sigh of relief, discarded Dummy's losing diamond.

South's worries were not over, however, because after drawing trumps he would not have enough spades left in Dummy to ruff out the entire diamond suit and thus must seek to establish at least one diamond as a winning trick in its own right. This he effected by ruffing out West's Ace. First the trumps were drawn, East winning the Ace on the first round and returning a trump. South now ruffed the five and Jack of diamonds in the Dummy and two low clubs in his own hand.

Had either the club Queen or the diamond Ace fallen on these plays sufficient tricks would have been established without taking any chance. When after these four plays South was back in the lead and both minor suits were as yet unestablished, a new line of play was necessary. South therefore led the diamond King, and West was powerless. If he put up the Ace Dummy would ruff and South's Queen would be established. If he played low, one of Dummy's clubs would be discarded and the diamond King would win the trick, whereupon the Ace would fall on the next round and be ruffed. In effect this method of play is in no way different from the finesse in which North holds the diamond Ace, West the diamond King and South the diamond Queen-Jack-ten. South would lead the Queen, attempting to force a cover by West and thus establish the Jack and ten. In this play the relative value of all the cards is the same, with Dummy's trump acting as a super-Ace.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Guard Eyes Against Disease

You can have no more precious possession than a pair of good eyes. Unfortunately, many persons neglect and even abuse the eyes. They fail to take the simple precautions which will guard against injury and disease.

Dr. Copeland

Many foolish persons suffer from eyestrain, fully realizing that glasses are nesessary. Others having provided themselves with spectacles, fail to wear them when they are most needed. Many a person walks around with glasses in the pocket when in reality he should be wearing them every minute.

When the time for wearing glasses arrives, there will be found a need to change the lenses from time to time. On that account, it is of the utmost importance that the eyes be tested pretty regularly. Wearing the same lenses for a long period of years may result ultimately in weakening the eyes and actual damage to the sight.

Many children require glasses, yet, very naturally, young mothers object to their use. The parent fears they detract from the appearance of the child. This is a foolish attitude we all admit, but it is a perfectly human one. It is encouraging to know that many children who wear glasses in early childhood strengthen their eyes so that the glasses are not required in adult life.

Bear in mind that glasses are of greater curative value in the young than in the old. As we grow older certain changes occur that cannot be prevented. We can keep our eyesight from getting worse, but rarely can we cure chronically faulty sight. Frequently this is not the case in the young child.

During the summer months when the glare of the sun is intense I would advise those with very senitive eyes to protect them by wearing sun glasses. Of course, these glasses are not to be worn for reading, but only to guard against the irritating glare of the sun. They should not be used at all except in extreme cases.

Avoid excessive reading and straining the eyes. Never read under a glaring light, but use a lamp with soft and subdued light. The light should strike the reading matter without glare. Avoid small print if your eyes are at all sensitive and never read on a moving train. Respect your eyes by avoiding all unnecessary strain.

Infections of the eye should receive special attention. What may appear trivial to you may lead to a serious complication if proper measures of relief are not taken. Spots before the eyes, pain in the eyes, excessive watering of the eyes, bloodshot eyes, unequal pupils and other disturbances are signs that demand immediate attention. Neglect may lead to permanent injury.

Answers to Health Queries

Mr. F. F. S. Q.—What do you advise for toxic poisoning?

A.—Try to locate the underlying source of the trouble first of all. Keep the system clear. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

White spots on the finger nails are caused by injury to the matrix. So don't be rough when using the orange wood stick to lift the cuticle at the nail base. Time will shuffle them off.

Ears need a bit of make-up. They're out in the open now, holding back sidelocks with ringleted ends. Touch the lobes with cream rouge, apply powder lightly.

That old standby, rosewater and glycerin, equal parts, can be used as a lotion to make powder hold. Apply sparingly, friction in well, powder lightly. It does a heap toward the good appearance of the facial overcoat.

The voice that is sharply nasal is a serious defect. It is associated with the austere, refrigerated-hearted woman.

One so afflicted should consult a nose and throat specialist, who will find out what's wrong, prescribe proper breathing exercises that will correct it.

After the night laving, annoint eyelids and surrounding tissues with a cream. Keeps crinkles from forming.

Note of Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband lost some money lately and the men at his office took up a collection to make up the loss. He would like to write a note of thanks to be read at their union meeting, but I don't know just how to word it. We would be grateful for your help with such a letter. To whom should it be addressed?

READER.

Your husband's letter of thanks would be addressed to the man who forwarded the money, or if there was no special name attached to it, to the head of the union. And it might be worded something like this:

Dear Mr. Knowles:

May I thank you, and through you, the other members of the union, for the wonderful gift of the money that you sent me to make up for my loss? I was so touched by your goodness and generosity to me that I find it difficult to make my words of appreciation adequate. Such friendship and understanding are rare, and I am deeply, deeply grateful.

Losing the money was a tragedy to me, but through your great kindness, I am "on my feet" again. You will never know what this friendly act and this material benefit mean to me. They were both godsends. I hope that some day soon I may return this outs standing kindness.

Again my thanks, and all good wishes.

Faithfully,

The Twain Shall Meet

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly tell me who should pay the passage if the young man is a foreigner and lives in Europe and is unable to come to America to get his bride, and so they have to be married at his home? He knows that she is not a girl of means.

S.

This is such an unusual circumstance that, in the last analysis, it is the couple who must decide it. But I strongly recommend to the bride-to-be that, even if it is a severe hardship in her budgeting, she should arrange to pay her own passage . . . just as she would pay the expenses for her wedding.

CAPONE ON WAY TO ISLAND FORTRESS

groomed when the reporter called to him and ducked hurriedly—as Capone did in days gone by—when a photographer aimed a camera in his direction.

All Ready at Al's New Home on Rock

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Everything is ready for Al Capone—on a rock in San Francisco Bay.

Alcatraz Island, the new federal penitentiary for incorrigibles, to which Capone and 42 other convicts are being brought, has been ready for several days.

The convict population of the island—a 12-acre rock a mile and a half from the San Francisco shore—was announced at 47 just prior to the recent visit of Attorney General Homer S. Cummings. It is equipped to hold several hundred.

Once a Spanish fortress, the island served for many years as a United States disciplinary barracks until its transformation into a regular prison. Equipped with the latest devices of steel and weapons against attempted escape, it was described by Attorney General Cummings as "a vital part of our work of segregating the more desperate criminals."

The swirling currents from the Golden Gate form a natural barrier against escape and also isolate the island against unauthorized communication from the outside.

FUGITIVE SLAIN ON 'RIDE'

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Bethlehem police today said a man, found shot to death in a lane, has been identified as Arthur F. Thompson, alias Monkey Dean, whom they described as a criminal with a record in at least two states.

Police said the identification was made through fingerprint records of the Wilkes-Barre police.

The records disclosed, police said, Thompson is wanted for passing counterfeit in a number of cities. He was implicated in the shooting of a policeman in Gloucester, N. J., on January 24, 1934, and escaped from the Montgomery County Jail on September 24, 1927, they reported.

Thompson was found shot to death early today. His clothing bore the name George Harris and the label of a Camden (N. J.) tailoring firm.

have turned out to be gallant welchers.

THE LATEST display of American financial genius consists in shipping American gold abroad. First, the government took away any gold that American citizens happened to have. It was too good for them. Then we raised the price of gold to $35 per ounce, nearly doubling it, thus enriching the British, that own the world's principal gold mines. Now we start sending abroad that gold, bought at fantastic prices with American taxpayers' money or taken from citizens by high-handed methods.

If there is among the African bushmen a six-months-old infant that knows less about money than the gentlemen that manage the finances of this country, that infant should be exhibited here as the legitimate successor of Barnum's "what-is-it."

RUSSIA USES one of the finest former residences of the czars as a summer and health resort for workers.

Sun baths are recommended and are taken in mass formation. Hundreds stretched out, side by side, gazing upward, absorbing ultra violet rays, hear a bell ring; instantly all turn over to take the sun on the other side. The bell rings again, and all turn on their backs again.

Surely there is in that Russian arrangement some valuable suggestion for our government management of all activities. You could not imagine our great industrialists all rolling over at the sound of an NRA bell, but the idea could be used, in SOME fashion.

THIS IS good news. Despite all our troubles, drought included, farm incomes for 1934 are up more than one billion dollars. Government gives the figures as follows: For 1934, $5,950,000,000. For 1933, $4,858,000,000. That includes monies paid by government to farmers for NOT planting, for farrow sows, later drowned with their unborn pigs, etc.

Some suggest that the drought was a punishment for drowning those innocent little pigs, but you could not imagine Providence putting an unborn pig, eyes not even open, yet, ahead of the plans of college professors.

IS THERE TOO much baseball in prison life? In the Illinois Pontiac Reformatory, the prisoners were playing baseball, as usual. Only thirty guards in charge of 2,400 men. The customary riot broke out, prelude to a "general break." The attempt failed, for rifles "cracked" promptly, sixteen were shot down, some will die. Three guards were beaten, the print shop was set on fire, flames spreading to the laundry and storeroom, prisoners yelling "burn the whole place down."

The 2,400 prisoners were all young men, from seventeen to twenty-six years of age. That is the important detail.

SHIPS FORCED TO DETOUR ALCATRAZ

By HAROLD HEROUX
International News Service.

ALCATRAZ ISLAND, Cal., Aug. 20.—Within a few days ferryboat captains will be changing their courses to avoid coming close to this island in the middle of San Francisco Bay and the site of Uncle Sam's newest federal penitentiary.

For years ferryboats, taking advantage of favorable tides and currents have floated within a stone's throw off historic Alcatraz Island.

But no longer will this be the case.

Because James A. Johnston, warden of America's so-called "Devil's Island," has erected huge signs for all to read, including ferryboat skippers.

A typical sign, painted in large black letters on a vivid yellow background, reads:

"Warning—Keep off!

"The Secretary of War has declared that only government boats shall be permitted within 300 yards of Alcatraz.

"Persons attempting to enter without authority do so at their own risk!"

To back up this warning are numbers of trained gun guards, armed with the latest efficient equipment and stationed in a series of towers, some to be seen from a distance, others being concealed. Warden Johnston, noted as one of the nation's leading penologists, refused to disclose the number of guards on the island. He said today:

"The maximum of security of its inmates is the main objective of this prison.

"The worst of the worst prisoners will be kept here. And they will be kept here, as the government has spent several hundred thousand dollars to make this prison 'escape proof.'

"Trained guards from Atlanta, Leavenworth, McNeil's and other government prisons have been transferred here to assure a crack corps of custodians.

"Alcatraz guards have been put through an extensive training. They will be able to cope with attempted breaks or riots.

"Whether or not Al Capone is coming, we are ready for the worst of them."

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings made a thorough inspection of Alcatraz last Saturday and said he was extremely pleased with the institution, which has been remodeled since being taken over from the War Department. Formerly Alcatraz was the Army's main prison in the West. Cummings said:

"Alcatraz has all the scientific advantages of a modern prison. It culminates the government's dream of segregation. Only the 'bad men' of other federal prisons, the incorrigibles who annoy not only prison guards and officials, but other prisoners as well, will be sent here."

Vacationist Slain, Mistaken for Thief

BERLIN, N. J., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—On the third day of his vacation, Robert Winthall, 21, Philadelphia youth lay dead yesterday as he walked into the wrong bungalow and was mistaken for a burglar.

Using his West Berlin bungalow for the week-end, police said, Winthall awakened the home of Charles W. Sutton, after spending several hours with friends. Sutton, with his quarrelsome fox terrier, answered the noises and fired one shot at a man he found standing in the dark dining room.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Change in Ball Indicated Sudden Drop in Scores Low Figures Now Rule

Views Differ on Grove Tennis Reign Continues Brouillard Long Sought

It isn't likely that John A. Heydler or William Harridge will admit that any change was made recently in the uniform major league ball. It will be remembered that for years after the liveliest ball of all was introduced in 1921 the league powers persistently denied that it was different from the one formerly used. But scores in the big show have shown such a sudden downward trend of late as to warrant the suspicion that the rabbity pellet was quietly withdrawn and that the manufacturers were secretly ordered to slow down the rocket, for a trial period at least.

John A. Heydler

While an occasional big score has continued to crop out here and there, run-getting and hit-making in the main have shown a marked change. Scores that sounded like basketball ceased abruptly. Last Friday and Saturday, no fewer than eight shutouts were pitched in the majors. Saturday witnessed the hurling of two two-hit games. In a total of 66 games played in the last eight days, 11 shutouts were recorded and there were 48 instances in which clubs scored only two runs or less. At Forbes Field last week, one pitcher, Parmelee, reached the eighth inning without allowing a hit, and two others, Hubbell and Grimes, got that far with only one safety charged. It's hard to believe that the flingers throughout the two leagues became so very effective all at once after the middle of August without some help in the form of a slowed-down ball, though perhaps the rabbit will be brought back again later with the usual denial that there ever was any change.

HELEN JACOBS STILL SUPREME AT NETS

Except for her successful leadership of the American Wightman Cup team, it wasn't a very brilliant record that Helen Jacobs boasted for 1934 when the women's United States championship tournament opened at Forest Hills. She had failed in her quests of the English and French titles and had met defeat in the Seabright finals. But her decisive triumph over Sarah Palfrey in 43 minutes of play yesterday, 6-1, 6-4, to win the national crown for the third straight time, equaling the achievements of Molla Mallory and Helen Wills Moody, showed that when there is a special goal to be reached, the Berkeley (Cal.) star still is supreme among America's women players. Unless Mrs. Moody can complish it in her proposed comeback next year, there is ne in sight likely to dethrone Miss Jacobs.

Possibly, the present champion won't be swinging a racquet in defense of her amateur title in 1935. She won't discuss the offer of $25,000 a year she has just received from Promoter William O'Brien to turn pro, but $25,000 is a lot of money and Helen may give it quite a little consideration. Perhaps the amateur powers, fearful of losing another drawing card, had that in mind when Miss Jacobs wes permitted to wear spiked shoes to protect an injured ankle in her match with Mrs. Harris last week, despite the rule of "No spikes" announced when the tourney opened. What's the good of being champion and getting pro offers if you can't break rules?

CALIFORNIA FIRST IN PLAYER PRODUCTION

Not only has California been cleaning up in a flock of other sports this year, but records show that it sends more ball players to the major leagues than any other state.

A team capable of taking care of itself anywhere could be picked from the California delegation, four of the players being Pirates. At first base, there's Gus Suhr; at second, Cookie Lavagetto, and at shortstop, Arky Vaughan, all of the Buccaneers. Another shortstop is Dick Bartell, of the Phils. Third base, Johnny Vergez, Giants. Outfield, Wally Berger, Braves; Chick Hafey, Reds, and Ernie Orsatti, Cards. Catchers, Ernie Lombardi, Reds, and Harry Danning, Giants. Pitchers, Larry French, Pirates; Curt Davis, Phils; Tony Freitas, Reds; Johnny Salveson, Giants, and Charley Root and Roy Joiner, Cubs. Reserves, Lefty O'Doul, Giants; Mark Koenig, Reds, and Red Worthington, Braves.

HELEN JACOBS KEEPS TENNIS LAURELS

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 20 —(AP.)— Helen Hull Jacobs sported the women's national tennis championship today without a dissenting vote.

For the third straight year the 26-year-old Berkeley, Cal., star won it on her own yesterday, defeating little Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass., in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4.

By the convincing way in which she carved out her victory over Miss Palfrey yesterday the three-times titleholder left no doubt as to her superiority in women's tennis in this country. Except for a four-game lapse in the second set, Miss Jacobs was in complete control.

As the result of her third successive triumph Miss Jacobs took a place with Mrs. Moody and Molla Mallory, the only other players to win the championship three times in a row.

The doubles championship went to Miss Jacobs and Miss Palfrey who defeated Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Caroline Babcock, of Los Angeles, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

CARLYLE WINS HEARST CUP

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Lewis Carlyle, of East Islip, L. I., yesterday won the William Randolph Hearst outboard motorboat trophy, outscoring Horace Tennes, of Chicago, winner of the 1932 and 1933 regatta titles, 2,250 points to 1,628, in the South lagoon of the Century of Progress.

George Coleman, of Miami, Okla., scores 1,169 for third place. Carlyle started by winning the Class A-1 amateur event, with Tennes second and Don Frazier, of Rantoul, Ill., third. He landed third in the Class B test, behind Frank Davis, of Kansas City, and Art Jacobs, of Chicago, and added another third in Class C. Coleman won the latter event, with Joel Thorne, of New Rochelle, N. Y., second.

By winning the Class D race, Carlyle accumulated enough points to win the trophy, although he went on to place in classes E. and F. Tennes won the F race, the final on the program, to save second place.

Bike Riders Start Cross-Nation Grind

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20. —(AP.)—In a revival of cross-country bicycle riding, 66-year-old Ed Doran, Sr., pedaled away from the San Francisco City Hall yesterday to start a relay grind to New York.

Doran, who participated in a similar event in 1896, was relieved at Oakland by Hank Hendricks, who, about 10 miles farther on, gave way to Bill Fehrere. The relief riders followed in automobiles.

Believe It Or Not (Reg. by U. S. Patent Office) By Ripley

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY: THE MOST UNBELIEVABLE ANIMAL—In his "Essays of Travel," chapter "Forest Notes," Robert Louis Stevenson tells of the capture, in 1378, by the youthful King Charles VI. of France, of a stag whose "talismanic" collar bore an inscription to the effect that the collar had been given to the stag by Julius Caesar. The capture took place in the forest of Fontainebleau, near Senlis. Caesar's sojourn in France (Gall) dates back to 58 B. C., so that if any credence could be placed in the old legend the age of the stag at the time of its capture would be about 1,436 years. The legend is very prevalent in the Fontainebleau Forest country. THE FATHER OF GOVERNORS—Lewis Latham, of Estor, County Bedford, England, falconer to Charles I. of England, died in 1677 and was the father of Frances Latham Clarke, wife of Jeremiah Clarke, one of the earliest settlers of Rhode Island. From Frances Latham, three times married, are descended nearly all the early governors and lieutenant-governors of Rhode Island. There are listed 13 governors and nine lieutenant-governors who are direct descendants of Frances Latham. In addition, the strain has given the United States hundreds of attorneys general, speakers of the Legislature, senators, chief justices, generals and clergymen.

Boxers Injured, Bouts Postponed

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Injuries to featured performers today caused postponement of the featherweight title match between Baby Arizmendi and Mike Belloise and threatened to wipe the Tony Canzoneri-Harry Dublinsky bout off the program.

Arizmendi, Mexican flash who was to tackle Belloise in a 15-round bout at Dyckman Oval tonight with New York state recognition as 126-pound champion awaiting the winner, suffered a bad cut over his left eye in training and the bout was postponed for one week.

At the same time it became known that Canzoneri, campaigning to regain his lost lightweight championship, had suffered a leg injury and would ask for a postponement of his own match with Dublinsky, scheduled for Wednesday night at Ebbets Field.

BENGE SUBDUES HOYT; YIELDS FOUR HITS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

How he shook with a fear for his money!
Just a washout, except that you're funny."

Then the poor Dodger spoke,
"That's a pretty good joke,
If you'll pardon a timely digression,
You're a humor that's keen, and with envy I'm green—
We have walloped you eight in succession!"

Yes, indeed, folks, the worm has turned, Casey is having the last laugh and he has produced an interesting baseball paradox or something. The Dodgers are winning and they's still funny, while the Pirates are losing regularly and they are not a bit comical.

Stengel's team can lose and get more favorable space in the metropolitan dailies than the Giants and Yankees on a winning streak, so the Dodger ringmaster, like Gilbert K. Chesterton, seems to be the master of the paradox, also.

WIN EIGHT STRAIGHT

To get down to brass tacks or cold turkey, the Buccos have not won a game from the Dodgers since they trimmed Casey's team at Forbes Field as far back as June 13. The Flatbush crew copped two games before they left Pittsburgh and when they collided with the Buccos in Brooklyn in July they repelled them with four defeats. They trimmed the Oaklanders, 2 to 1, yesterday, for the second victory in the present series. And that makes eight in a row for Casey, doesn't it?

Moreover, the Flatbush boys are the biggest reason for the second-division plight of the Pittsburghers. Had the Buccos won just half of the eight battles mentioned they would still be in the first tier; instead they are three games below Bill McKechnie's Braves, who hold tenaciously to fourth place.

HOYT BOWS TO BENGE

The smallest Sunday crowd of the season was on hand to see Waite Hoyt bow in defeat before little Ray Benge. Hoyt pitched brilliant ball in the clinches, but his mates were powerless before the mixed servings dished up by

JUNIORS, GIRLS MEET IN SOFTBALL FINALS TWIN BILL TODAY

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE.

As Deacon Phillippe, home-spun philosopher and former Pirate pitcher remarked to Larry French yesterday:

"You got to be able to take it, Larry, and you're takin' it pretty well . . . A fella runs into a long string of bad luck out there and then it turns—and gets worse . . . I reckon your hard luck will do you some good later in life, but you have to take it now."

Deacon could have it, he showed that in 1903 when he tried to pitch half the games in the world series with the Red Sox only to lose out at the finish . . . But he came up still it, and darned if the ol' boy couldn't reel off a few innings right now.

Phillippe's philippic also applies to Pie Traynor . . . Pie is eating plenty of wormwood these August days, and maybe Pie's luck will change—and get worse . . . Shakespeare, it was who said, "Sweet are the uses of adversity," but Pie says he is going to check up on that crack on the first off day of the Bucos, which is tomorrow.

And speaking of philosophers and wise men, did you know that Casey Stengel was the Bobby Burns of baseball . . . Casey's wit, like Burns', does not detract from his wisdom, rather it sharpens it.

It was Burns who wrote, "Let not ambition mock their honest toil," or words to that effect, in speaking of the poor and obscure . . . Well, Casey did not belittle a busher of the American Association and he came up with a surprising tip which he has developed with much success against baserunners who often betray their larceny intent by the advance motions of their arms and legs.

Here's the Caseygram:

"When I managed Toledo there was a swift guy in the league who almost had us nutty. . . . He would take a long lead off first with his arms flying." (Time out, please, to allow Casey to give his animated movie imitation of the sprinter taking his lead.)

Now go on with the story:

"We never knew on what pitch he would run, for he always seemed to take his jump with the same motion . . . But one afternoon he took off for second, and the quiet country boy sitting in the back row of our dugout schoolroom detected something that all of us smart baseball men missed . . . The busher quietly remarked:

"'That fellow always flops his arms when he takes his lead, but when he makes his mind up to go, he raises them a little bit higher.'

"Well, of all things! That is just what was happening . . . And perhaps we did not crab that sprinting act after we got that tip! . . . It was a cinch to waste the pitch and let him run right into the ball at second . . . No, sir, you can never tell in this game . . . Just keep your ears open and your mouth closed in baseball and you'll often pick up a gem, even from a busher." . . .

"That's Casey's motto, and don't forget—most of those 'nice fellows' you meet in baseball generally land in the minors."

LOTT, STOEFEN MEET DEFEAT

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—George Lott and Lester Stoefen, the Davis Cup doubles heroes who will defend their national title this week, headed for Philadelphia suffering from a stinging five-set 3-6, 6-1, 14-12, 2-6, 6-3 defeat which Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, a long established team, handed them yesterday in the final round of the Newport Casino team play.

Lott and Stoefen, following A. U. S. L. T. A. suggestion, teamed up here last year. During their brief partnership they have dropped but two other matches, to Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill in their previous Casino competition and Ian Collins and Frank Wilde in the Queens Club play that opened their recent spectacular British campaign.

GREENLEE FIELD IS SCENE OF TITLE FRAYS

By PHIL GRABOWSKI

Softball Tournament Secretary.

Champions in the junior and girls' divisions will be determined today in the first of two doubleheaders which will conclude play in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's first annual Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament.

Today at Greenlee Field, Bedford avenue, the Commercial Garage Juniors take on the Pioneers, of Carnegie, for the junior title in the first game of the twin bill. The Goldenson Vanities and the West Newton Scholastics are to clash for the girls' championship. The first contest is slated to get under way at 5:15 p. m.

Wednesday, the intermediate and senior division champs will be decided. The Gabbel Cycles, of New Kensington, who won the bracket title, will oppose the New Kensington Merchants for the crown, while the Campbell Shamrocks encounter the Commercial Garage tossers for the senior division laurels and the right to represent Western Pennsylvania in the national tourney at Chicago.

MOUND ACES OPPOSED

Pitcher Marino Bettinelli will be the hope of the Commercials. Manager Sam Carilli's Pioneers are banking on Felix Golinsky, who pitched scoreless and hitless ball for seven innings against the Calvary team, winner of the Bracket I title. The Calvary team got its first hit in the eighth inning and scored its only run in the ninth.

The Goldenson Vanities-West Newton Scholastics conflict brings together two fine teams, and a close battle is expected. Both the Vanities and the Scholastics had to ward off last-inning rallies to emerge victorious in the semi-final round games. The South Siders eliminated Modern Food and the West Newton aggregation defeated the Cecil Reds for the right to play in the final.

Edythe Forsythe, bespectacles pitcher, probably will be Manager Helen Kasputis' choice to oppose Nuttall, of the Scholastics. Both pitchers hurled in the semi-finals and scored victories. Miss Forsythe won all four games she pitched in the tournament. Miss Nuttall, like Miss Forsythe, is a very good batter.

BIG CROWDS ASSURED

The advance sale of tickets for the final games indicates that the interest in the battles is in keeping with their importance, and big crowds appear to be assured. Tickets for each day's doubleheader are being sold in the lobby of the Sun-Telegraph Building and at the downtown office, Fifth avenue and Market street, for the nominal sum of 25 cents. Tickets not sold prior to a few hours before game time will be available at Greenlee Field. Registered tournament players, given special consideration, may obtain tickets at this office for 10 cents each.

Sports Shorts

Dizzy Dean and the St. Louis Cardinals' management will appear before Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who will pass judgment on the club's disciplinary suspension of the star pitcher at St. Louis today.

William O'Brien, sports promoter, today said he had offered Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs $25,000 to renew their tennis feud professionally. Both Helens said that they were not interested in playing as pros, and Mrs. Moody added that she had received no offer.

Byron Baur, Erie, yesterday won the men's singles championship in the Northwestern Pennsylvania tennis tourney at Erie by defeating Henley Sklarsky, Niagara Falls, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2. The Cleveland team of Bill Carran and Paul Minnick beat Baur and Joe Smith, Erie, for the doubles title, 7-5, 7-5, 8-6, and Joan Hanley, Erie, won the women's singles crown.

The list of favorites was intact as the national professional tennis title tournament went into the third day at Chicago today. Ellsworth Vines, Jr., and Vincent Richards were impressive in early round victories.

After taking three successive beatings from Jack Lovelock, Bill Bonthron, Princeton star, finally tipped the table on the New Zealander at Paris yesterday, winning a 1,500-meters race in 3:57. Jack Torrance won the shot put and discus, and Eulace Peacock annexed the 100-meter dash and broad jump as the American athletes made a sweep of 11 events.

Donald Budge, California youngster, upset Sidney Wood to give the West an even break at victories each as the annual East-West tennis series was concluded at South Orange, N. J., yesterday.

SPORTS COMMENT

much stuff as ever. Higgins and Coleman disagree, saying Lefty is not as good as formerly. Mickey Cochrane, who caught the ace southpaw for nine seasons, takes the view that Grove's arm is not sore, but dead. Mickey calls attention to the fact that Lefty pitched five years for Baltimore in pretty stiff competition before he ever went to Philadelphia. In those five years Grove pitched in 206 games and 1,184 innings for Baltimore. In the next nine seasons he pitched in 402 games and 2,401 innings for the A's, a pretty heavy tax on an arm in 14 campaigns.

Lefty Grove

Cochrane says that in his nine years as Grove's battery mate he never heard Lefty utter a word about a sore arm, and that nobody else did, either. Mickey adds that he gets tired and disgusted hearing many other modern pitchers complaining about one thing or another, generally about imaginary sore arms, their favorite stunt being to have their arms massaged as often as possible. The big trouble with them, asserts the man who has made the Tigers do more things this year than even Clyde Beatty could do, is that they have been babied so much they have lost their virility and have become a lot of mollycoddles. Mickey offers to wager that nobody ever heard a sore-arm complaint from Radbourne, Rusie, Waddell, Bender, Coombs, Plank, Johnson, Walsh, Mathewson, McGinnity, Donovan, Mullin, Wood or several dozen other first-class pitchers. "They wouldn't have known what to do with a massage if they had heard about one," Cochrane says. "They didn't know what a rubbing table was. They went in and pitched and used their heads. Now the boys just go in and throw, and look for the club trainer and his rubbing oils."

TAKES THREE YEARS TO GET BROUILLARD

When Lou Brouillard, former welterweight and middleweight champion, steps into the ring at Hickey Park Bowl in Millvale tonight to trade punches with the walloping Anson Green in what bids fair to be one of the most rousing fistic numbers seen here in many months, Jules Beck will have established a new record among the matchmakers of the country for endurance, patience and persistence. For it took Jules as long as three years to sign Brouillard for a local fight. He started dickering with Manager Maurice Lemoine in 1931, after Lou won the welterweight title from Young Jack Thompson, but one thing or another bobbed up to prevent the closing of every match proposed. The telephone company was enriched to the extent of several hundred dollars for long-distance calls before the matchmaker finally succeeded in landing the prize.

Lou Brouillard

In being able to show Brouillard tonight against such an opponent as Green, Beck considers his persistent efforts well rewarded. It figures to be a slugging battle between two rough, tough fellows, with a possibility of winding up in a knockout either way. Brouillard's capture of two championships, and his victories over such men as Jimmy McLarnin, Mickey Walker, Ben Jeby, Young Jack Thompson, Paul Pirrone, Baby Joe Gans, Johnny Indrisano, Canada Lee and others attest the class of the French-Canadian southpaw. But Green's wallop rates the Homestead Negro a chance against his top-notch opponent, and there ought to be no lack of thrills for the crowd while the two are punching it out.

Butler Marksman Wins Shoot Title

CAMP PERRY, O., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—R. E. Louden, of Butler, Pa., won first place in the Camp Perry individual small-bore rifle match yesterday as the national small-bore tournament, with nearly 300 competitors entered, got under way.

Louden had a total score of 492 out of a possible 500. He scored 197 at 50 yards, 199 at 100 yards and 96 at 200 yards.

Grimm Ailing, Gabby Pilots Cubs

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—(INS.)—Manager Charley Grimm, of the Cubs, went to St. Louis today on what was described by President William Walker as a leave of absence to patch up his injuries. In the absence of Grimm, Catcher Gabby Hartnett took up the managerial duties temporarily.

Grimm's departure again called to life recurrent reports that Owner P. K. Wrigley, in his quest for a championship baseball team, has decided on a change of managers once more. This was denied by club officials.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 20.—The twelfth annual United States public parks tennis championships were concluded here yesterday after a week of hectic action, the men's singles crown going to Washington, the men's doubles bauble remaining in Minneapolis, and the women's singles and doubles honors being divided between St. Louis and Cleveland, respectively.

In the man-to-man division the two-year reign of Arnold Simons, Lousville, was terminated by Barney Welsh, lengthy and lean Capital star, in a torrid, windblown final encounter, 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 8-6.

Mrs. Ruth Bailey Prosser, of St. Louis, retained the women's singles premiership by trimming Mrs. Katherine Rose, Cleveland dark-horse, by the decisive tally of 6-1, 6-4.

Chuck Britzius and Billy Schommer, home favorites, pulled up from behind to edge out the ultimate set, in their masculine dual windup with Welsh and McElvenny, Capital hopes, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 1-6, 7-5.

GREEN FACES BIG TEST IN BROUILLARD

By JAMES MILLER

Lou Brouillard, who now held the middle and welterweight championships, keeps a date with Anson Green, Hazelwood's ugly and cunning Negro middleweight puncher, at Hickey Park Millvale, tonight, and Lou'd better be right. One mistake and the Pittsburgh Chesatian is likely to be scraped from off the canvas.

The bout is an important and Agnes to be a pip. The winner will find himself squarely in line for a go with the winner of the Tavoso-Dundee title scrap, scheduled for September 11. Both Green and Brouillard rate with the best of the 160-pounders, Anson because of his terrific punching and Lou because of his all-round ability. He's the more crafty of the two and has the greater experience, making him a favorite to win tonight's bout.

ANSON CAN PUNCH

But, we repeat, he'd better be right. Let Anson crack him on the whiskers with one of those devastating punches of his and it will be curtains for Mr. Brouillard.

Green, too, cannot afford to take any chances. Brouillard is not exactly a creampuff puncher, in fact he can hit almost as hard as Anson. There are a flock of fighters running around on their heels today who have tasted the power in Lou's left hand. His left hook is a thing of beauty and a joy forever, but not for the gent with whom it comes in contact.

In the six-round semi-final, Al Quaill of Brookline, takes on Jack Dalcherone. Billy Flannigan, of Clearfield, meets Casey Rhodes in the second bout and Dick Ambrose battles Dick Wickets in the opening go. The first bout is set for 8:30 o'clock.

Tomorrow night, at Forbes Field, a card of 12 crack amateur bouts will be offered, the proceeds of the show to go to the police pension fund. The card is one of the most attractive ever to be scheduled in these parts.

GRAYBER PUNCHED

Joey Bazzone, Mike Bazzone, his brother; both fighters, and Bill Dummer, local second, will be suspended by Dr. W. D. McClelland, Boxing Commissioner, as a result of their concerted attack on Al Grayber, referee, in the dressing room following the fights at Conneaut Lake Park Saturday night.

The rumpus started after Joey Bazzone lost an eight-round decision to Joey Speigal in the semi-final to the Fyttie Zivic-Young Joe Firpo main bout. Bazzone and Dummer, who handle the Tube City fighter, carried the grievance to the dressing quarters, where it is said that all three "worked out" on the official.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY OF GREATER PITTSBURGH

TRADE WATCHES FOR FALL RALLY

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—In its weekly review of business and financial conditions the Wall Street Journal says:

The time-honored movement for the inception of the fall revival in business is only a fortnight away, yet the financial community remains beset with doubts as to whether business this year will experience a material quickening and, if so, what its extent will be. The securities markets, over the past week, reflected the caution prevailing in Wall street, and the sharp difference in opinions. The week ended with the market level very little changed from that prevailing at its outset, with movements in individual stocks over the week highly mixed.

REBUILDING HELPS

On the favorable side of the ledger for those attempting to balance the various factors which go to make up the general business outlook is the home renovation program, sponsored by the administration. With co-operation from banking institutions the drive may be more productive of re-employment and assistance to individual businesses than had seemed probable. Another is the generally anticipated increase in the rate of government spending. A third is the hope that the plethora of idle funds will force capital to go to work but hopes along that line have been entertained for so long that they are beginning to get slightly shopworn.

On the darker side, the uncertainty of business men over the direction of the next breeze from Washington remains as a major barrier to business upturn. The business community is cautious, lacking the confidence that is so cheerfully ascribed to others. New and old strikes, and threats of wholesale walkouts, as in the case of the textile industry, are sufficient to quench the business man's enthusiasm for initiating new enterprises, and make it difficult to carry on the old.

Business volume has held fairly well during the slack summer season, but profits have faded, and the whole question of the profit motive, and its place in the New Deal, continues to be in doubt. Wholesale prices are rising, and it doesn't take a genius to see that the administration's efforts to keep the consumer contented will bear most heavily on the manufacturer, the retailer and business men generally. Then, too, even the most economically naive must admit that the administration has a job on its hands when it attempts to check a rise in the price level.

SEE GAINS

Based on past performance, business currently should be at about the low point for the summer. In railroad circles, some traffic improvement in September and October is looked for, and the level of freight movement should move above the like period of 1933 again. Like the utility companies, the railroads are suffering from rising costs, and the profit outlook is not encouraging. Consumer goods lines continue to do the best, with the capital goods industries, where unemployment is the largest, still in the doldrums.

Steel operations suffered a relapse in the past week, the national average falling to 22.3 per cent of capacity, a loss of 3.5 points, or 13.6 per cent on a tonnage basis. This is the lowest point of the current decline, the previous low being the 23 per cent rate for the week beginning July 2.

A letdown in tin plate specifications and failure of the early buying movement for fall requirements to put in an appearance accounted for the slump. Steel men are still hopeful that some of this buying will develop shortly and are expecting the outlook to be more clearly defined sometime in September.

'Bulls' and 'Bears' Quit Wall Street To Play With Grains at Chicago

PERCY A. ROCKEFELLER

New York Exchange Trails Board In Volume

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The old stock market gang is now operating in the grain markets.

This is the understanding of La Salle street and Wall street.

This is the reason President Roosevelt on Wednesday warned that the chiselers and profiteers would have to reckon with the federal government, that federal agents were intensifying their vigilance over the grain and produce exchanges.

PLAY GRAINS

Names that were once magic words in Wall street are now being mentioned in connection with commodity operations.

Meehan, Percy Rockefeller, Bragg, Ben Smith, Cutten are among the "big names" mentioned. Whether they are actually doing anything or what they are doing, of course few people really know.

The dollar volume of grain transactions on the Chicago Board of Trade during July was $1,206,000,000 or nearly three times the dollar value of stock trading on the New York exchange for the month of $458,000,000. The July turnover in wheat alone amounted to $894,000,000.

Gossip has it that the "eastern crowd" has not made large profits to date in their grain operations. It is said that they did not get into the market on an extensive scale until after the greater part of the recent advance that has already taken place.

CUTTEN COLLECTS

Arthur Cutten, according to street gossip, has made something of a "killing" in corn. The yellow cereal has long been a favorite of Cutten's and with the smallest corn crop in 33 years forecast, the price has advanced rapidly and, if reports on the street are to be given credence, helped to restore some of the Cutten fortune wiped away in the 1929 stock market crash. A Canadian by birth, Cutten is said to have operated heavily in the Winnipeg market.

Michael J. Meehan, famous for the pool that he conducted in the stock of Radio Corporation, recently bought a seat on the Chicago Board of Trade. Since, it is said, heavy orders have come through for his account.

Percy Rockefeller, Ben Smith and Tom Bragg were alleged to have been among the big bear operators during the Hoover markets.

Mr. Cutten

It was rumored at that time that they had cleaned up millions on the short side of the market. Now they are said to be operating in grain, although no one seems to really know whether they are or not.

Among the Chicago traders who are said to have been heavy traders are "Tommy" Howell, who caught the 956-pound tuna fish from his private yacht. Friends say Howell has been as successful in his grain trading as in his fishing.

TRADE ABROAD

Dan Rice, George Koehl, "Herby" Blum and Ed Maynard are other Chicago operators who are reputed to have profited from being on the right side of the grain market. They are said to be trading in the Liverpool, Rotterdam, Buenos Aires and Winnipeg markets as well as on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Even Jesse Livermore, the one-time "boy plunger," who recently went through bankruptcy, is alleged to be trading, either for himself or others, on an extensive scale once more.

Speculators thought the criticism of President Roosevelt unfair, insisting that the farmers would never have received as much as they did for the short grain crops of this year if the speculators had not purchased when the hedging sales were taking place.

AUTUMN SPURT IN BUSINESS EXPECTED

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—As the vacation season draws toward its close, industrial trends continue to stomp along the bottom of the summer slump, but a healthy volume of retail trade is accepted as augering well for an autumn revival of general business.

Business analysts, while disinclined to minimize the drought, are now estimating aggregate farm income substantially above last year's and warn that business confidence has undoubtedly been unduly disturbed by the widespread crop damage.

Lower temperatures and considerable rainfall have had a distinctly beneficial effect upon sentiment.

Dun & Bradstreet's weekly survey found retail trade for the country at large still running ahead of last year, save in some of the drought areas. Best reports came from the Southwest and the Pacific Coast, with gains as high as 20 to 30 per cent over last year, while the advance had fallen to as low as 2 per cent in the East.

Steel production slumped to a new low for the year, the movement of freight declined, and electric power production, while registering a small gain, was up less than seasonally. Industrial gains in the past week have not been entirely lacking, however, for scattered reports of quickened operations came from makers of paper and paper products, typewriters, rubber goods, metal containers, chemicals, and other miscellaneous lines. Relative quiet prevails in the textile industries, but shoe factories are planning higher schedules for the immediate future.

The building lines are awaiting the results of the opening of the federal home renovation drive with high hopes. Some large dealers in building supplies report a pickup in business. Residential construction in July declined substantially, so the renovation drive comes at a time when it is needed to rescue the home building lines from the doldrums.

Father, Son Drown; Rescue Attempt Fails

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—John Walker, 46, and his son, Howard, 15, of Carbondale, drowned last night in a water-filled cave hole near their home, the father sacrificing his life in an attempt to save the boy.

When Howard lost his balance and plunged into the water, the father, although unable to swim, dove into the hole and in a few seconds both sank from sight.

U. S. Man Released From Devil's Island

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—(AP.)—Oscar G. Nordman, former Pacific Coast ship officer, has been released from the French penal colony on Devil's Island and returned to Tahati to resume his tourist business. He served four years of a 20-year sentence for an alleged insurance fraud in connection with the scuttling of a ship.

Steel Companies Drop Back Into Red

By GEORGE B. SNYDER
Business Editor

STEEL COMPANIES pulled out of the red in the second quarter, but it is quite likely that most of them will drop back into it for the third quarter.

Mr. Snyder

A sharp drop in steel production was generally expected after July 1, but it was thought that improvement would start in August and would be extended in September. While most steel men thought that third quarter results would be poorer than those of the second quarter, they were hopeful that a fairly substantial volume of production would be restored within a short time.

But more than half of the third quarter has been passed and optimistic hopes have faded. Steel has not revived and it shows no signs of any substantial revival before the latter part of the year.

Average Prices Show Increase

THE INDUSTRY is getting higher average prices for its products than it did during the second quarter. But the drop in production has been so sharp that higher prices per ton has not compensated for reduced volume.

To a certain extent the present slump is artificial. Consumers bought steel in anticipation of their needs during the second quarter in order to avoid paying higher prices in the third quarter. At present their surplus stocks are being consumed. But the actual use of steel also has declined and business expected from some sources has not materialized. This has been responsible for the failure of demand to improve during recent weeks.

Quarter Showed Abnormal Gain

JUST AS THE second quarter reflected an abnormal increase in volume, the third quarter will reflect an abnormal decline.

This decline will be accentuated by the failure of railroad buying to continue in substantial volume, by a gradual tapering off of automobile production, and by the low state of activity in other steel consuming industries.

Under such conditions only a few steel companies can show a profit.

MOSCOW FEARS RAIL SEIZURE

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Aug. 20.—While the Soviet press was warning its readers that Japan may seize by force the partly Russian-owned Chinese Eastern Railway, it was reported in semi-official circles today that four more Soviet citizens, officials and minor employes of the railway, had been arrested.

Bringing the total arrests past the two score mark, the four latest were reported to have been made by Manchukuo police at the railway stations at Pogranichnaya, Imyanpo, Sochinzi and Talpinlin.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—(INS.)—A spokesman for the Japanese foreign office today said Japan would protest to Moscow against an alleged breach of faith in the recent negotiations for the sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokio.

The broken agreement, it was reported, was the publication in Moscow of the price involved in the sale negotiations.

De Valera Foes Ban Tax Payments

DUBLIN, Aug. 20. — (AP.) — Gen. Eoin O'Duffy's Blue Shirt party was on record today with a resolution pledging its refusal to pay annual land taxes so long as President de Valera continues the trade dispute with Great Britain.

The resolution was passed yesterday at the annual conference of the Blue Shirt party, a conference which was attacked by a mob of 1,000 persons throwing rocks.

BEDFORD HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 20.—(INS.)—Roy Stillman, nationally known parachute jumper, was near death today after falling 2,000 feet here. He was equipped with two parachutes, which he had frantically attempted to open.

The accident occurred at the Bedford Airport during an air show presented by the Westchester Air Pilots' Association. More than 8,000 spectators witnessed Stillman's plunge.

SCHOOL ASKED FOR BECKS RUN

Residents of the Berks Run district will be granted a hearing before the Board of Education to protest against the closing of the district school, if a letter from Congressman Henry Ellenbogen to Marcus Aaron, president of the board, is heeded.

Early in July the board acted to follow Superintendent of Schools Ben O. Graham's suggestion that the school be closed because repairs would cost more than the building was worth. Pupils would be transported to the Wickersham School on Carson street by taxi, it was announced.

Residents of the community protested without success.

In his letter to Aaron yesterday, Ellenbogen asked the Board of Education to consider the case, stating that the school's closing would "impose serious inconvenience and hardship on students and parents," due partly to the fact that pupils "who missed transportation by car will be forced to walk upon a highly traveled highway which has no sidewalks for pedestrian traffic and on which a number of people have been killed in the past few years."

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 20.—(AP.)—A short, sudden turn in a 15-foot outboard motor boat last night sent five persons to their deaths by drowning in the Columbia River near here. The boat upset.

DODGERS JINX TO PIRATES

Benge's fast ball and curve were judiciously interspersed with a slow offering, the latter throwing our sluggers right out of their stride. The upshot of the smart pitching by the enemy right-hander was a four-hit classic.

Hoyt was trying for his twelfth victory of the year, but ran into his fifth setback, although he was yanked in the sixth for a pinch-hitter. Smith and French finished the game.

LEAVE 16 STRANDED

The Dodgers got close to the record for leaving runners stranded when they left 16 players on the bases. They were able to reach Hoyt for many a hit, but the veteran was in rare form with men on the sacks.

Frederick's double and Leslie's single in the fifth provided the first run of the game. Smart Al Lopez beat out a bunt in the sixth and he scored the winning run on singles by Frederick and Taylor.

Donnelli Absent, U. S. Booters Lose

MEXICO, D. F., Aug. 19.—(AP.)—Playing without their star internationalist, Aldo (Buff) Donnelli, of Pittsburgh, the New York Americans soccer team was beaten, 3-1, by the Club Atlante, in a return match yesterday.

The visitors, who won three of five games with ranking Mexican teams, left for home last night.

SIEFERT NEW TRAINER

SECOND PLACE RACE CLOSE

Now that the Book nine has the City League championship safely tucked away for another year, the only interest in the circuit will be centered in the battle between the other clubs for second place. At the present time Parmelee has the edge, but Homewood still has a chance this evening at Olympic Park. The Homewood club will try to improve its position by meeting the Books.

Manager Bill Dalzell is going to send Joe Beggs to the mound. Benny Steele will work for the champions.

One game is carded in the Pittsburgh Independent League. This contest finds the Pitcairn nine traveling to Wilkinsburg to meet the Millikins.

The Crawfords won both ends of their double bill with the Philadelphia Stars yesterday at Greenlee Field, taking the first game 6 to 4 and the second 4 to 1.

To the Sports Editor:

I'm strong for red-blooded rooters at a ball game, and I can sympathize with the Detroit fellow who yelled so loud he was told to get more control of himself. But it made me think how strange it would be if people did the same kind of rooting under different conditions. For instance, imagine a fellow with leather lungs sitting in a theater, bellowing out "Atta boy!" when the actor pulled an especially good line. Or when the villain got in his dirty work, the audience would start shouting and throwing pop bottles. No, it just wouldn't work there.

Personalities in Softball

Helen Bercik, of the Modern Food team, played a great game against the Goldenson Vanities last week in the semi-final round game of the girls' division in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament. She plays third base and possesses a strong throwing arm. Her hitting is good, too. The Moderns were eliminated by the Vanities, who will encounter the West Newton Scholastics today for the girls' championship of Western Pennsylvania at Greenlee Field. The East Pittsburgh team finished in second place of Bracket I.

Helen Bercik

Irving Brenner, tall pitcher of the Commercial Garage outfit, which defeated the S. A. O'Tooles in the semi-final game in the playoff series in senior competition in the Sun-Telegraph tournament, has not been beaten in tournament play. Although the Commercials lost one game, that defeat was credited to Hooks Jordan. Brenner is one of the hardest hitters with the Hill district aggregation. He graduated from Duquesne University in June, where he starred in basketball. Irv may pitch for the Bracket V champions against the Campbells Wednesday at Greenlee Field.

Financial Topics

Quiet Stock Market Reflects Dull Business

The speculative stalemate pictured in the lifeless drift of the stock markets which carried into the new week reflected also reflected the course of business. Industry and trade have marked time for almost a month now. Following a sharp recession in June and early July as spring manufacturing schedules were curtailed for the summer. August seldom is a month of decisive movements in business and financial markets but this year seasonal inertia is considered to be unusually pronounced. Study of week-end trade summaries and industrial reports indicated no essential change in trends. Demand for automobiles, textiles and other consumers' goods apparently has been holding well. But heavy industry is still becalmed. Recovery in the bond market last week revived hopes that some life could be injected into the stagnant capital market later in the year. Revival of the heavy industries always has been linked with a good capital market. Bond men, however, are reserving their conclusions about the future of the investment market until they see how the Treasury makes out with its expected refunding operations in the fall.

Stock market commentators found several reasons to explain the relapse of speculation into almost complete inertia. Early in the summer when extreme dullness settled over the stock market, the advent of federal regulation of the security exchanges was held partly responsible for the stagnation. Since then the market has had opportunity to habituate itself to federal rule. Apprehensions that the SEC was intent upon "cracking down" on Wall street have been believed to a large extent. Although the ban on manipulation doubtless is a contributing factor, brokerage house opinion tends to ascribe the dullness to "fundamental causes." These include the usual seasonal inactivity, uncertainty over future monetary moves by the administration, the fall elections, inflation prospects, anticipated refunding operations by the Treasury and doubt over the effects of the drought upon farmer purchasing power and business. All these help to encourage a waiting attitude in speculative quarters.

Economists who argue that slow recovery is the world-wide trend found support for their thesis in the survey of world conditions by the Foreign Policy Association. The rise in prices of raw materials, for instance, has been hailed in various financial quarters as of far-reaching importance in promoting recovery and reviving trade between industrial nations and the colonial countries. It was assumed that the world effects of the rise in wheat, corn, silver and other important commodities would outweigh domestic crop losses insofar as it aided in restoring equilibrium in the economic structure and expanded international trade. Just as farmers suffered a drastic loss of purchasing power at home from the fall of prices from 1930 on, so did nations like Canada, Australia and the leading South American countries lose their power to buy abroad when their principal exports underwent a severe shrinkage in value of volume.

World business recovery, as the Foreign Policy Association's report pointed out, has been spotty and unevenly distributed. The same is being said about current business trends in the United States. Business prophets assume fall trade this year will be unusually spotty. Some sections of the country, notably the southeastern states, expect bountiful harvests and will benefit from higher prices for tobacco, cotton and other crops. Gains in those sections are expected to go far in offsetting losses elsewhere. Further survey of the crop situation, taking the country as a whole, convince some Wall Street observers that gloom over the potential ill effects of the drought was overdone last month and early in August.

While restoration of the purchasing power of producers of basic commodities has done much to expand internal trade, no big strides in restoring world trade to old dimensions are expected in some Wall street quarters until foreign exchanges are stabilized and restrictions in form of currency controls and tariffs are relaxed. Most countries are still too preoccupied with internal problems to give much consideration to international co-operation for removing trade obstacles.

Prices of cotton, hogs, sugar, grains and other leading staples have recovered to levels which prevailed before the European financial crisis and before England went off gold about three years ago. The European financial crisis in 1931, with its disruption of the so-called gold-exchange standard and then the gold standard itself, exercised a deflationary effect upon prices in the United States and other countries which remained on gold. Some financial observers consider it significant that the general level of stock prices and of business, after recovering to about the September, 1931, position, have been unable to make further progress. From that it was inferred the effects of currency depreciation abroad had been counteracted by the devaluation of the dollar and then extension of the recovery was dependent upon removal of barriers to trade and restoration of investment confidence.

On the 1933 "dollar devaluation" upswing in stocks, the market topped off in July at a level which approximated that of late September, 1931, about the time the British pound was cast adrift from gold. Last February industrial shares on the average duplicated the July, 1933, peak, making what chartists call a "double top." Meanwhile, the market also has made a "double bottom," the late July break having tested out the lows of last October. Thus the market is moving within clearly defined limits. When it breaks through one way or other, chartists assume, the market should be able to get up steam for a broad and important swing.

RETAILERS WIN CODE FIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Retailers have won another decisive victory in their fight with manufacturing trades in the apparel and ready-to-wear industries over the question of quantity rebates and discounts in excess of fixed cash discounts.

Irving C. Fox, counsel and Washington representative for the National Retail Dry Goods Association, advised his office that the NRA had just overruled the stand taken by the code authority for the infants' and children's wear industry that article 9 section 8 of their code prohibited the granting of quantity discounts.

Indications that the NRA might issue such a ruling in the retailer's favor were seen last week when on the question in the bias tape code, the administration ruled that in regard to that code, fixed cash discounts and quantity discounts or rebates had no relation, and that the code provision governing fixed, cash discounts did not bar the granting of quantity rebates for large-scale purchases.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—Raw sugar was as quiet early today and no fresh business was reported. Buyers were believed interested at 3.25, for Cubas in suitable positions, but holders were asking from 3.28 to 3.30.

Futures opened unchanged to 2 points decline and were easier during the balance of the forenoon under increased September liquidation and selling by commission houses. There also appeared to be some hedge selling by producing interests, while aside from covering on the scale down there was little demand in evidence, with the market at midday ruling around the lows.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 4.75 for fine granulated.

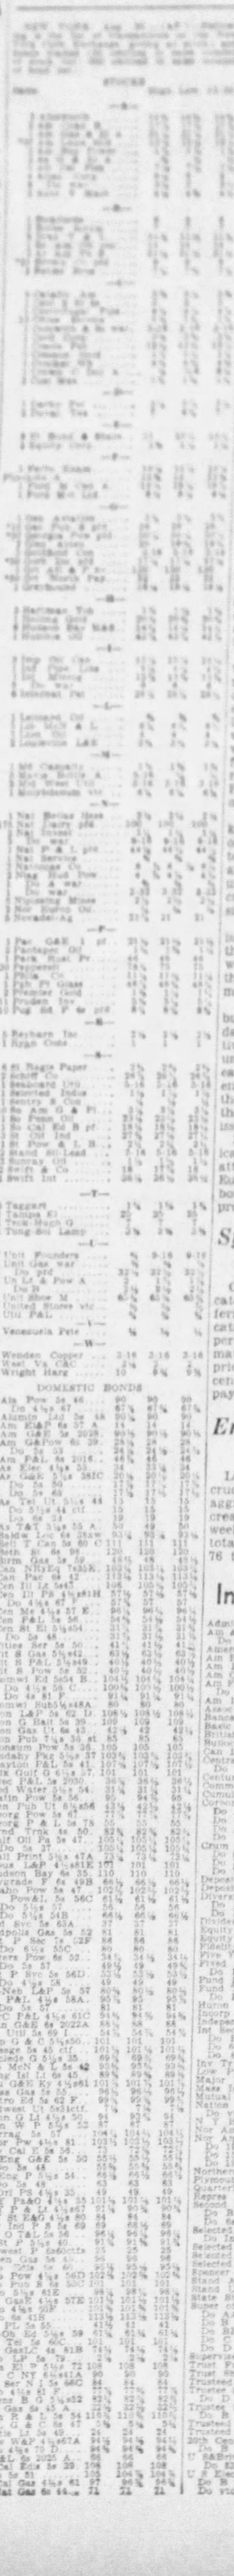
NEW YORK CURB MARKET



FEDERAL BONDS LEAD MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—Bonds staged a vigorous recovery last week under the leadership of United States government obligations.

Except for Monday, when prime investment issues were a little shaky, a firm tone marked the course of trading and prices in every section of the list improved substantially. Low-priced rails and utilities along with Treasury issues, made especially good gains.

The week's trading began under the influence of inflation sentiment and the effects of the preceding week's sharp break in government security prices. The belief gained favor that this attitude was somewhat overdone as the week progressed, however, and inflation fears were mostly put to rout by the shipment of gold to Paris in response to the high level of foreign exchange.

This was regarded in the market as an indication of a relatively orthodox treasury policy in respect to the gold position of the dollar, and acted as offset to whatever unfavorable investment impression created by the nationalization of silver.

United States government issues recovered a large part of their recent losses. Sizable gains were registered every day, and the firm trend attracted investment buying into corporate loans.

The market was particularly buoyant on Tuesday and Wednesday when buying assumed relatively large proportions. The volume of trading dwindled with each session, however, and by the end of the week had receded to the modest levels prevailing before the recent weakness in high-grade issues stimulated business.

In the foreign list, South American, particularly Argentine issues, attracted more attention than European obligations. French bonds advanced, however, approaching their peak levels.

Syndicate Offers Chicago Bond Issue

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—A syndicate of five Chicago banks is offering $4,000,000 Board of Education of the City of Chicago 4¾ per cent refunding bonds of 1935 maturing September 1, 1954, at a price of 103¾ to yield 4½ per cent to maturity. First coupon is payable September 1, 1935.

English Rubber Stocks Increase

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Stocks of crude rubber here on August 18 aggregated 51,640 tons, an increase of 85 tons compared to the week preceding. Liverpool stocks totaled 55,757 tons, an increase of 76 tons.

Britain Using Up Wealth By Taxes

By B. C. FORBES

THE AMERICAN visiting Europe and talking with people of various nationalities, returns home convinced that the whole world has become more or less unfair to or unequal to previous standards. The net impression is distinctly disquieting.

Mr. Forbes

TAKE BRITAIN. We have been repeatedly told of the rubberstamp economic recovery made there. We have been told that Britain is far ahead of America in solving depression problems.

Having been reared to manhood in Britain and therefore able to make comparisons, I cannot become enthusiastic over the conditions I found there.

TWO MAJOR developments impressed me as most unfavorable.

First, I could not avoid the disquieting conclusion that Britain, the British government, is living to an alarming extent on the fat, the wealth, accumulated during the century preceding the World War.

SECOND, the qualities which made the British nation great, including industriousness, ambition, frugality, serious-mindedness, self-denial, aversion to accepting charity, have become tragically weakened.

WHAT HAS happened throughout the United Kingdom was illustrated by a view from one hotel. An enormous, historic castle which was intact on my previous visit had been abandoned, wrecked, its roofless walls radiating ghastliness.

The explanation?

To escape the dreadfully heavy taxation levied in Britain, the owners of any building must destroy its roof.

Whereas the life of earls formerly owning this castle and the extensive lands from which they drew rent, had lived most of the year in the castle and devoted their lives mainly to carrying on helpful activities among the people, thereby winning intense affection, the present youthful earl, his income drastically injured by taxation and the impaired condition of his former tenants, elected to abandon the ancestral home, live in London and indulge in a useless life.

I LEARNED of countless titled families who had had to abandon their ancestral country castles or tear them wholly or partly down and move to cities, thus largely uprooting their old-time place in their communities.

Thus is unbearably heavy taxation bringing about a far-reaching change in the social structure of Britain.

DEATH DUTIES—inheritance taxes—have become so terrifically heavy that instance after instance is recorded of wealthy families being fatally impoverished by two or more deaths in rapid succession. The newspapers, while I was there, recorded one case of a huge fortune being almost totally wiped out by the death, first, of the head of the family, and by the death shortly thereafter of his widow.

I COULD NOT but conclude that the British government has been able to carry on by confiscating fortunes accumulated under the old economic and social order.

But relatively few new fortunes, naturally, are being created.

Therefore, the prospect is that the day will come when taking money from the rich to distribute it in doles to the unemployed and for other costly "social" government purposes will no longer be possible.

ALTHOUGH most of the substantial Britons I talked with express confidence that the nation's troubles have been effectively overcome and that Britain has a future as "glorious" as her past, I cannot avoid feeling that they are mistaken.

THE MAJORITY of the younger generation are not possessed by the seriousness of purpose, the dogged determination, the spirit of thrift and self-reliance animating their fathers and forefathers.

The attitude they display is: "Let us eat, drink and be merry today the government takes care of us now if we don't work and will take care of us if need be, for the rest of our lives."

IS THE American government of today in danger of adopting policies calculated to bring about somewhat similar notions?

(Copyright, 1934, B. C. Forbes.)

Cities Plan Few New Bond Offerings

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

Safeway System Reports Increase

Safeway Stores System sales for four weeks ended August 11 totaled $18,535,453 against $17,287,318 in the like 1933 period. Sales for 32 weeks were $144,033,671 against $131,673,145 a year ago.

WALL STREET VIRTUALLY DESERTED

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—Low Saturday numbers were again the rule on the New York Stock Exchange today as the market drifted aimlessly in routine business.

Brokerage circles continued to watch for Washington tonsors which might turn up a little encouragement. What many brokerage men considered as the gravest danger since labor legislation and the income tax is the financial sector.

Stocks as a whole, recorded only minor changes, although some of the market's top specialties showed gains. While wheat got up a cent or more a bushel and cotton firmed, profit-taking tended to retard any sharp upward movement in these staples. Rings at Chicago pressed forward to their bonus prices since 1931. United States government issues were a trifle easier and corporation bonds marked and filled the differently. The dollar was a bit higher in terms of leading foreign exchanges.

Shares of United States Steel, rising got up more than a point and fractional improvement was shown in such issues as du Pont, American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Home Stand Santa Fe, New York Central, Southern Pacific, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward and United States Industrial Alcohol. The tobaccos were somewhat lower, as were United States Steel common and preferred, Bethlehem Steel, Standard Brands and a number of others. Many stocks were unchanged from their Saturday's closing figures.

Declarations of an extra dividend by du Pont, while pleasing, was in line with most presumptions. It had been expected that the company, the largest single holder of General Motors shares, would pass along the extra which had been voted by the automotive concern. The moderately better tone displayed by American Telephone was said to have reflected the satisfactory six months' earnings statement of the company's New England subsidiary.

Most commission house commentators found that general sentiment toward stocks was still rather nervous, although some encouragement was derived from the apparent hesitancy of shareholders to liquidate in volume. At the same time it was obvious that the buying urge was extremely faint.

With Labor Day only a fortnight away, the majority of usually active traders were inclined to save their ammunition until the trade firing line is less obscure.

It was pointed out that among the deterrents to bullish revival are the low rib of steel production, fears of detrimental effects on business of the drought and labor troubles, feebleness of foreign trade and domestic construction and the inability of most railroads to expand traffic sufficiently to overcome increased operating costs.

Hope for equities, however, was expressed by some analysts who recalled that many issues, if figured on the former gold dollar basis, are down to around the levels which existed prior to the inauguration of President Roosevelt last year. In addition it was noted that, while indices of business activity have receded to about their lowest since last December, they are still some 25 per cent above the bottoms of March, 1933.

Exchange Changes Canned Food Rule

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—For the purpose of broadening the market and to conform to prevailing trade practices, the basis of contract in the canned foods futures trading on the Commercial Exchange of Philadelphia has been changed to provide for delivery of commodities at any point, with freight allowance to New York. The buyer will have the option to name destination with a freight adjustment to the New York rate. Prices under the new form of contract will represent the cost of the commodity plus the freight to New York. Announcement of the change in rules providing for this new form of contract is effective today.

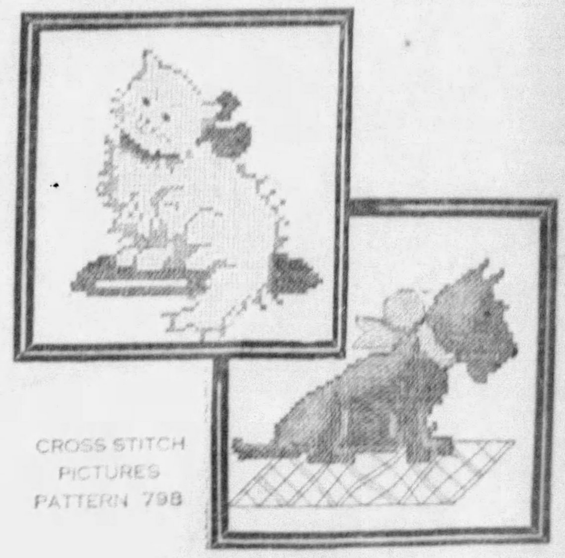
NEEDLEWORK DESIGNS



Cats and dogs, contrary to many peoples' impression, often are most friendly. This pair makes a decorative set of companion pictures or pillows. They are both in cross stitch and are done in a shaded effect to look nice and soft and realistic. They are the sort of thing that is done in a jiffy and make a most acceptable gift or fair contribution.

Pattern 798 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a cat 5¼ inches square and a Scottie 5x5¼ inches; a color key; material requirements and directions for making a picture and pillow.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York, N. Y.

STEEL OUTPUT CONTINUES TO DROP

Seven weeks have elapsed since consumers stocked up with steel and the failure of new demand to appear long after the time anticipated, with widespread labor difficulties and increasing uncertainties regarding government policies, is exerting a pronounced depressing influence in the markets, states the magazine Steel.

Scanning the immediate horizon, steelmakers can see only prospects for additional government work and some revival in automobile requirements.

To find a counterpart of the doubt that prevails among steel sellers it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the administration's recovery program. A year of the steel code—the anniversary of which fell on Sunday—finds steel wages, prices and employment enhanced 8 to 16 per cent, and iron and steel production down 55 to 57 per cent.

AUTOS DECLINE

Automobile output continuing to decline last week was slightly under 54,000 cars, though the recession is meeting with unusual resistance, the reduction in output from the week of July 14 being only 20 per cent.

Some prolonged shutdowns in the automobile industry will be made over the Labor Day period and the month is expected to be the slowest in motorcar productivity since January. Though the first steel tonnage releases for 1935 models appear to be scheduled for that month, it is generally believed that it will be late in September or October before actual rolling of the steel commences.

MILLS BUSY

While many of the lighter finished steel rolling mills are idle, awaiting accumulations of miscellaneous orders, structural shape mills are operating at a relatively high rate, mainly on government awards. Architects and engineers have few new projects before them; a survey of 46 in one of the leading industrial districts last week revealed prospective steel tonnage from the total number is less than 2,000 tons.

Steel works operations last week dropped 6 points to 21½ per cent. Pittsburgh was down 4 points to 15 per cent, Chicago 4 to 28, Wheeling 4 to 26, Cleveland 19 to 13, Buffalo 9½ to 23½, Eastern Pennsylvania 2½ to 20½, New England 9 to 29, and Youngstown 16 to 22. Birmingham advanced 5 points to 25 per cent, while Detroit held at 77 per cent.

Steel's price composites are unchanged, the iron and steel index holding at $32.23; finished steel, $54, and steel works scrap, $9.96.

MRS. ROSS NOW MRS. CROESUS'

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(AP)—Mrs. Hallie Tatem Ross, divorced wife of the secretive, and today she loved the "Mrs. Croesus" whom she walks into an army office and gives a billion dollars worth of bonds, Mrs. Ross declared.

"Gold is everywhere! All about you there is it—gold and more gold and still more gold. It has an overwhelming influence. Down in there among such a fortune you come to understand how some men can become misers.

"Then I realize I am Director of the Mint and I am told by the feeling of being personally responsible for the physical safety of so much treasure."

Mrs. Ross said it was good for a citizen to see a billion dollars worth of the nation's bullion. She explained:

"You know Uncle Sam will manage. The tangible wealth is his. It is there waiting for distribution."

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XXXVII

Jerome let the chest wall sink and back to go out by the front door and discover what, at this wee hour, the threshold he fetched up with a gasp. His raw sagged, which was unusual for Jerome. He was the sort of man to become tight-lipped under the stress of any sudden strong emotion.

Linda was standing on the edge of the porch. Her bright hair was adorned by a chaplet of orange blossoms and round her neck was a garland of jasmine.

She wore a garment that any man, however much of an innocent in the field of feminine costuming, could not help but recognize instantly as a bride's dress. But no modern costumer could have created, designed, or then furnished such a bridal dress as hers. It was of very old Spanish lace, yet trimmed or bordered or appliqued with this priceless material but completely made of it.

This wondrous fabric entirely clothed Linda, and at the same time it unclothed her. The lace wedding dress had been made to wear over some other garment, however light, and not to be put on next to that finest and loveliest of charm containers, a flawless skin.

Linda's fresh coloring had ripened to the rich old ivory of the tropic zones, but it was perfectly evident that the lovely old lace was spread directly over a lovely young skin. There is a luminosity about a fresh cutaneous surface, even when sun-darkened. This glowed through the open meshes of the lace as a rich old Amontillado glows through the figured design of rare cut glass.

Trousseau in Chest

But Jerome's vision did not at the moment detail the beauty thrust upon it so startlingly. He had grown accustomed to Linda's gracious natural loveliness so that his first impression was that it had been profaned by this artificiality which in its way embellished it. But for the moment his mind fastened on the only possible source of such an exquisite costume.

"Linda . . . you've been into the chests . . ."

"Yes, and if we hadn't been so dumb we'd have been into them 10 days ago."

"What else was there?"

"More clothes and some lovely sheets and pillow slips and gorgeous couvre-lit all hand embroidered." Her face turned suddenly grave. "Jerry, it was a bride's chest, for her trousseau."

"Good Lord, Linda, you shouldn't have rummaged it!"

"I didn't realize it until I found this exquisite lace gown. Then I couldn't resist trying it on. Just for you to see. I'll put it back."

"What about the other chests?"

"Haven't opened them. Thought I'd wait for you."

"Please take this off, Linda . . . and try to put everything back just as it was. You're superb . . . glorious . . . but it isn't right."

She said contritely: "I know it, Jerry. Like rifling a tomb or an altar. I just wanted you to see . . . to see me as a bride."

"Well, I've seen . . . and it makes things even harder. Please go take it off, Linda, and put things back as they were."

"All right. It was so lovely I thought I'd slip it on and give you a surprise."

"You have. And it's premature."

Balks at Looting

"I admit that. But I'm not apt to have a wedding dress when we are wed, and certainly nothing as gorgeous as this wonderful lace. Even my elastic scruples would balk at looting it."

"Heaven forbid . . ." Jerome muttered. "That would be the last straw . . . and we've already loaded several bales of it."

"Yes, and I've a notion that this old camel's back is fairly tender."

"We've got a tough job ahead and that's no working rig to rassle a dory down over the dam and coast her along the slippery stones of the creek. Go take off the dress and stow it away just as you found it."

"Let's get breakfast first. You don't know how glorious it feels to be so beautifully dressed after skipping around naked for days on end."

"All the same it makes me nervous. Too much like stealing the votive offerings from a shrine."

"I felt that, but I'm getting over it. It was made for . . . who could she have been? What has happened to her?"

"His bride, of course. There may be some awful tragedy for all we know." He hesitated, then said in a lower voice: "Perhaps it suggested that terrible story of Kipling's about Bimi, the chimpanzee, that got jealous and tore the naturalist's bride to pieces."

"No . . . don't . . ." the color left her face. She reached for the fastening of the gown. As she did so the macaw gave a series of harsh, grating cries, then screeched with a different note than that of the raucous irony that usually emphasized its single emphatic query: "What in blazes do you want?"

Dueno Arrives

It launched itself from the branch and flew above the natural dam of the pool where it fluttered about, gyrating and squawking. Then came from an invisible source below the ledge a deep and resonantly musical voice.

"Ho, Cocky . . ." The rest of the greeting in some Teuton tongue that Jerome knew to be Dutch.

"Good Lord," he gasped. It's the Dueno!"

Linda might have bolted back into the house but it was too late. A dazzling white sunhelmet capping a strongly animated personality swept into view as if carried by a vigorous bound, and then became absolutely motionless in the bright slanting rays of the sun that had risen above the plateau to the eastward. Jerome and Linda standing on the edge of the porch were also powerfully illuminated. The white lace wedding dress shone and shimmered like a creation of frosted silver.

"Old . . ." said Linda faintly. "If the Sacred Name was not uttered blasphemously. Neither was it prompted as an expletive. Even if his palsied state Jerome understood what had inspired it. Fear. Reverence, and Awe . . . but chiefly Fear.

Linda's elucidation was derogatory. Just as the spot had impressed them as the Garden of Eden with its glamorous beauty and friendly beasts, the Tree of the Forbidden Fruit, etc., so now did the commanding figure that had so suddenly materialized itself suggest the Lord and Creator of all that was there.

'See It Is Eden'

The man was of magnificent physique and commanding visage, with tall and evenly trimmed snow-white beard. His costume was of immaculate whiteness, like the helmet.

For a moment this figure dozed contemplating them unmoved. Then one hand was raised to remove the helmet, disparaging a thick wavy mass of snowy hair. This exposed also the splendid forehead with its white bushy eyebrows set over eyes that looked dark and lustrous but were of a cobalt blue. The nose was straight, high-bridged, and commanding, and the cheeks lean but fresh and fine of skin.

Jerome muttered under his breath with a sort of grim despair: "So it is Eden after all! We're sunk!"

This reminder stiffened Jerome's own back. Like Adam, he became suddenly conscious of his near nakedness. Linda for Eve was clad, but Jerome for Adam was in only shorts and shoes, and he was embarrassed if not ashamed.

As if to prevent that sort of anticlimax that seems always a pity, however preposterous a situation, the illusory atmosphere was swept suddenly away. In perfect English and in a deep bass resonant voice the lord of the premises said: "So I was right. You made this island and repaired your boat. Then it was perhaps my meddlesome apes that set her adrift."

"Yes, sir," Jerome answered.

Guests for Bride

The big man who was in full vigor, if at the same time venerable, walked over to the verandah. The cockatoo fluttered over him then lighted on his habitual branch. Linda asked:

"Are you going to be angry with me for putting on this gown?"

"That depends. Why did you put it on?" A deep furrow drew itself straight down between his eyes.

"The gorillas stole our clothes." She described briefly how this destitution had occurred. The big man stroked his beard. His eyes seemed to bore into hers, but not accusingly.

"I am Dr. Van Dieman. The wedding gown you are wearing was made many years ago for my bride. If you are like she was, there is no offense."

Jerome remarked quietly, "Sir, she is."

"That," said Linda, "is because of Jerome. He said that this might be the Garden of Eden, and that I might be Eve, but he declined to be Adam."

The big man looked quickly from one to the other. "Sometimes I think that the sin of Eve was generosity."

"With what was not entirely her own," Jerome observed.

"It relieves me to hear you say that, Doctor," Jerome stated, "because we have helped ourselves to what we needed here. Even to tearing the planks off one of your chicken houses to build a boat."

"And where is the boat?"

"Inside the house, sir. We were afraid the gorillas might damage it."

Apes Fear Mateo

"But those apes are very shy and have been taught to keep away from the house premises. I am surprised they should have shown themselves at all. My servant, Mateo, has disciplined them."

"With a Transvaal whip," Jerome said. "Left handed."

Dr. Van Dieman gave him a sharp look. "So you found the hook I had made for him. Yes, I'm afraid that sometimes in my absence Mateo has been severe. His hot blood. Some years ago the captain of one of my freighters brought me a pair of young gorillas from Africa; male and female. Four years ago he brought me another pair, but the male died on the voyage. The others took kindly to this place."

Linda murmured: "I was wrong about the Deb."

"The Deb?"

"That's what we call the young lady that tags after Papa Gorilla. She's always with him."

He smiled. "Yes. I'm afraid that his conjugal fidelity is subject to reproach. She is the later immigrant. Another of my captains secured me some mouflon from Sardinia. I'm very fond of animals but dislike the idea of confining them closely. To me a menagerie or zoo is like penal institutions where the prisoners are innocent of any crimes deserving of incarceration. Other ships of ours have brought me specimens of different sorts that should live peaceably together."

Junior Patrol Mail Box

And this is his letter:

"When I was a boy of seven my brothers called me coal mine instead of Edward. One evening when I sat down for supper and my brothers said, 'We need more coal,' and my father answered, 'We don't have to buy coal Edwards' ears are full of coal.'

"The next morning my mother washed me with a scrubbing brush. The brush was rough and about a week later I learned to do it myself with a wash cloth.

We all have to learn sometime, Edward, and we'll bet there's no more looking boy for miles around your neighborhood than you are now. That letter wins the $2.50, fellows!

This second prize letter is from Douglas Goodwin of 607 West Main street, Clarksburg, W. Va.

"I do not like to wash my neck. I do not like to wash my ears. But my mother seems to. You'd think I was going to a picnic every day the way she scours me. She digs into my ears as if it didn't hurt. And rubs down my neck as if I was a pony. I would rather do it myself, but mother says I don't 'come clean.' I think we should get a chance at our mother's and father's necks, don't you?"

Jay Hooper, of 2727 Broadway, Dermont, writes the third prize letter and it goes this way:

"I don't think any fellow likes to have his neck and ears scrubbed as if he were a wooden Indian. That's the way mothers seem to go at it, so I would rather wash my own. I like to go slow and easy at first, then two or three quick rubs with a wash cloth and it's all over until the next day. Hope you agree with me."

Diamond Lane

Daily Short Short-Story

By WARREN A. REEDER

All the newspapers nowadays are full of stories about how they think Babe Dean is the most self-confident pitcher in baseball. They never did tell Al August Lane or they would change their minds.

When Lane first came to us the only thing he said was:

"When do I start playing third base?"

Mac squinted at him suspiciously. "How do you know you're gonna play it, anyway?"

Lane looked surprised. "Why—I'm just the good for you not to use." Which shows how he felt about it.

So in about three games we had to shove him in there and sure enough, he started turning the league up—in fielding and batting both.

He had his faults, of course. When nothing came his way in the infield for a while he'd grow restless and then start ribbing away back into left field and begin arguing off fly balls that belonged to the fielders.

I got a medal for doing that at Roxburyville," he told Mac, who tore into him about it right from the start. "But I had to quit it because the owner wanted to fire the left fielder." He looked at Mac cautiously. "You wouldn't fire Terry, would you?"

"Not unless he gets in your way," Mac tells him sarcastically.

"Oh." The kid looked relieved. "I'm awful glad of that, Mr. McDooley, because Mr. Terry has a wife and nine children to support, so—"

"Shut up, shut up, will ya?" Mac growled.

That was another fault with the kid he believed about anything you told him. He was a hound for obeying orders and so the boys rode him to death with false orders at first. But he took it nicely and soon they eased off him.

He sure improved our morals. He began getting us all to sign temperance cards.

He liked Mac quite a bit and was always trying to get him to sign the pledge. But he called him "Mr. McDooley" all the time, and that just about killed Mac, so he wouldn't sign.

So far as the pennant went, we didn't have a chance to cop the pennant, but we did start creeping up for third place, which would mean a little extra dough after the series.

It finally looked rosy down to a tie with the Browns. We had played ten games of a series and it all depended upon that third and final game.

It was a perfect day when that last game rolled around and the stands were packed with screaming fans, all wanting us to do or murder to the Browns. The game was a hair-raising, nerve affair.

We came into our half of the ninth one run behind and the Brown pitcher getting stronger every minute. Terry, first up, tried to dodge a bean ball, the ball struck his bat and he beat it out for a hit. The fans split the rafters and Mac tore his last three cigars to ribbons.

The kid was up. He was sort of preoccupied—about the only time we ever saw him that way—and he lumbered around with the bats. "What'll I do?" he whispered to Mac.

Any lap on earth could see what should be done—sacrifice the man down to second and get him in a scoring position. But Mac resorted to sarcasm again. "A nice home run would be great!" he sneered.

The kid had already selected his bat. "Home run?" he repeated, puzzled. He straightened and turned to look at the field and frowned thoughtfully.

Then he turned to the bats again. "I see," he said, and never cracked a smile. Then he picked up another bat and stepped up to the plate.

The Brown pitcher was rattled by this time and he threw over three balls in a row. The situation was tense now. A pass would automatically force Terry down to second base without wasting an out. When he wound up for the next pitch everything suddenly became quiet—you could hear the pitcher grunt when he steamed it in.

Cr-a-ck! We all jumped to our feet and craned our necks our feet and craned our necks our feet and craned our necks

The Duke Qualifies for Race

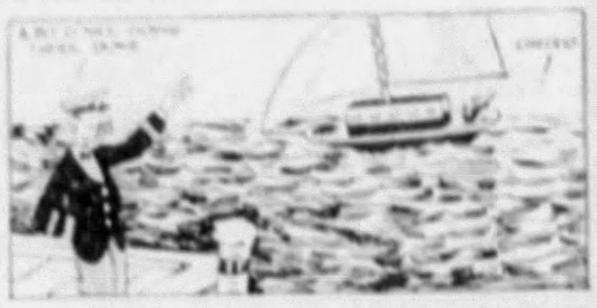
The Duke has named his challenger for Sunday. He says you can't ride with it.

We have been a little nervous about the Duke's yachting skills. We only know we saw him in water suit kneeling on a raft of boards in an Atlantic tailspin.

However, he had entertained us so royally in Charley Chan Square that we could not refuse his sportsmanly invitation to join him in a whack at sea.

He informed us that the Sassoon was in dry-dock between two pieces of land. Furthermore, the crew of the Sassoon was on strike. The Duke explained it was something about wages. They wanted wages. Any kind of wages. He managed to compromise. He put the crown on the last two syllables and shorted the first.

The Duke has a new idea about anchors. He makes them out of wood. They float. But they are easy to pull in.



Our first look at the Sassoon gave us the haunting impression that we had seen it before. Before informing the police we told the Duke about it. He told us the Sassoon was originally the pleasure yacht belonging Mrs. Jake W. Spoonch. A town using New York Mayor has named it in honor of his wife. The Mrs. Spoonch ran from the Battery to Staten Island and back again so often the cops felt didn't have to chase it. It had worn a groove in the harbor.

The Duke bought it in at auction and put up a fancy rig. That fixed it fine. When the Duke went in for fury racing he acquired a giant New York rumrun. That's the competitive spirit. It burns as fiercely in the Duke's bosom as street lamps in an Eskimo village.

When we went aboard the Sassoon we saw six men pulling on a rope. On the other side of the Sassoon six more men were pulling on a rope. It was the same rope. They didn't know it, but they were playing tug-of-war. The Duke hired the team that won and fired the other.

We asked out to sea to Mrs. Jake Spoonch's Sassoon but the other suppers didn't show up. So the Duke sailed a triangular leg around Chowder Head Lightship easily beating a Penn Plate between the two points.

Whether the Endeavour gets across the Atlantic or not the Sassoon will be in the race and the Duke will finish in the Sassoon. He is a real sportsman and takes his whisky neat and his trousers wrinkled. We were supposed to sail with the Duke again today, but we missed the boat train because we were looking for an engineer and fireman wearing sailor hats.

The Patriots of 1898

Pittsburgh Is Proud to Welcome the Spanish War Veterans' Convention.

Pittsburgh is honored this week in being the place of the thirty-sixth annual encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans and auxiliary organizations.

Not a few of those patriots of 1898 present a grizzled appearance, reminding us of the passage of time.

It was 36 years ago that as youths they volunteered to protect the United States from such aggressions as we then felt the sinking of the Maine in Havana harbor to be. We no longer could tolerate Spain as a neighbor. Cuba and Puerto Rico had to be liberated.

Thirty-six years ago! But how vivid are the memories of those stirring days that are recalled by the veterans' convention!

Patriotic fervor probably never ran higher in Pittsburgh. The local National Guard regiments were eager to go. The name of the volunteers was legion. And Pittsburghers ever since have been prominent in the Spanish War Veterans' organizations.

Our visitors are among friends who are proud to welcome them, and will strive to make their stay in Pittsburgh enjoyable.

Repair Your Home!

An Opportunity Is Open to Pittsburghers to Revive the Building Industry.

The first loan for the improvement of a Pittsburgh home, as part of the national building and repair program of the Federal Housing Administration, has been authorized.

More than a hundred inquiries concerning such loans are reported by two downtown banks. It is much to be desired that ere long the applications will run into the thousands.

Here is an opportunity that every home owner who is short of ready cash should utilize to make needed repairs and improvements. Here is a chance to borrow money and save the house from the dilapidation and depreciation in value that are inevitable if it is not painted and repaired every few years.

The citizen who avails himself of this opportunity not only will be helping himself directly by safeguarding his investment and by making his home more habitable, but will be helping the community by doing his part to promote a revival of the important building industry.

The campaign, if as successful as we hope it will be, will furnish employment to thousands of Pittsburgh workmen now idle and give business to Pittsburgh producers of and dealers in such building supplies as iron and steel, glass, sand and gravel, cement, concrete, lumber, hardware and electrical equipment.

Drunken Pedestrians

For Their Own Good, They Should Be Taken In Charge by the Police.

Much has been heard about drunken drivers, less about drunken pedestrians. It is time something was said about the latter.

The Division of Safety at Harrisburg reports that 500 pedestrians, killed or injured during the first six months of the year, apparently were intoxicated. What a ghastly record!

It would be a waste of energy to advise men to stay off the streets when drunk.

It might be more profitable to ask the friends of drunken men to see that they are not allowed on the streets. Let them be sent home in a taxi.

Perhaps the best plan would be to have policemen take obviously drunken men on the streets in charge—for their own good. Even if they are apparently able to navigate, it is unsafe to trust them to dodge automobiles.

A School for Three

Good Citizens Will Glory in This Carrying Out Of the Contitutional Pledge.

Walter, June and Merle Wright live at Walnut Bend, in President Township, Venango County. They are the only children of school age in the district. The nearest district with a school is on the other side of the Allegheny River, and there is no bridge.

Now the State Council of Education's regulations do not permit the maintenance of a school with less than 10 pupils. But the Constitution of Pennsylvania guarantees an education for every Pennsylvania child. So the State Council authorized the operation of a public school at Walnut Bend just for the three Wright children.

It is almost like furnishing them a private tutor. But we believe that every loyal Pennsylvanian will glory in the fact that the State has not permitted exceptional expense to keep it from fulfilling its constitutional pledge.

Show Business Picks Up

Some Might Argue It Shows Increasing Prosperity; Some Might Argue Otherwise.

But it takes on considerable importance when you learn that the same chain reported a net loss of $642,293 last year.

Show business, it would seem, is picking up.

From that point of view the greater receipts are a good sign.

On the other hand, many people go to the theater to forget their troubles.

And many others who see what happened to careful investors from 1929 on are not impressed with the wisdom of saving.

So what?

Move Over!

One of the things—and chiefly one of the things—that has been holding business back is TAXATION.

Business pays a Federal income tax. In some States it pays a State income tax. In addition, it pays corporation taxes, property taxes, and so on.

Naturally, every dollar taken from business for government has a direct effect upon prosperity—or the lack of prosperity.

Business expansion is curbed and employment is weighted down by excessive taxation.

And now, besides all the other imposts it has to carry, industry must pay for the NRA, and it is estimated that the cost of supporting the NRA organization will be MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS next year.

Right now an upper question in the minds of many business men is this—

Are we working for ourselves and our employes, or simply working for the tax gatherers and the politicians?

LISTEN, WORLD!

The Secret Feud

Of all the pesty problems in this peevish world that ancient feud between men and women is the cussedest, and it causes, I'll wager, more domestic tragedy than all other provocation put together.

So secret is this feud, so furtive its technique, that it is hard to give it a concrete name. But the various grudges held by female against male may be lumped under the blanket title of "THEY DONE US WRONG," and find expression in these well-known slogans:

"All Men are Brutes."

"A Woman Always Gets the Worst of It."

"Never Trust a Man."

"Every Man Will Take Advantage of a Woman."

"Never Tell a Man Everything."

"The Woman Always Pays."

"No Man Understands a Woman."

"You Can't Trust a Husband Out of Your Sight."

Are these slogans casual wisecracks? Or hangovers from the Horse and Buggy Days? They are not. They represent a definite feminine philosophy, as deeply rooted as any religion and far more widely observed. Every little girl has heard them by the time she's 6, and has begun to practice them by the time she's 16. They are handed on, with solemn warnings, to every bride and repeated with increasing bitterness by every wife.

Now why should this be? Why should modern women still believe that All Men Have Done Them Dirt, or are just itching for a chance? Was the charge ever true?

Yes, I know, sisters, we all lived in harems once, and were sold on slave blocks. But, after all, weren't things chancey for both sexes in those rough and tumble days? Did even men have easy pickings? And did we actually object as much to these harems and slave blocks as we say we did?

Seems to me—just putting two and two together—that quite a lot of Us Girls are putting up a vigorous struggle right now to acquire well-furnished harems and well-financed Cave Men. And, so far as I can see, about the only difference between a slave block parade and one in modern evening dress is maybe a couple of inches of sunburn.

So just why we should blame it on the males beats me. But blame it we do!

Amazing as it seems, in these days of freedom and equality between the sexes, the female sex, as a whole, has exactly the same secret resentment toward and suspicion of the male as it did when Eve tried to put the bee on Adam in the Garden of Eden. And this attitude pops up in a hundred current problems and raises endless Cain.

If you don't believe me, drop in on any divorce court and listen to any wife retailing her wrongs against any husband.

The lady will cite any one of a score of grievances in justification of her demand for separation and compensation. But actually her complaint will be based on that ancient ground, approved by practically every female — ALL MEN ARE MONSTERS, ALL WOMEN MARTYRS. And heaven help the Judge, when election time comes around, if he doesn't agree with the ladies!

Now this, I protest, is plain nonsense. We might have made the charge stick once, but the boys don't even look the part any more, much less act it. Any little 90-pound, dish-faced, modern doll can out-dance, out-eat, out-swim, out-smart and out-strap the huskiest hombre that ever went into a huddle. Yet she'll have the nerve to totter into court and tell the judge that she's Just a Broken Blossom.

But I'm warning you, sisters, we're pushing the racket too far! I'm a female myself, and as willing to demand dividends for imaginary wrongs as the rest of us. But we simply can't go on having all these lovely new Privileges and Opportunities and yet make 'em think we're Shackled Slaves.

Pretty soon, if we keep it up, we're going to make ourselves look silly, and the Big Stupes will start laughing. And then what?

MAN WHO LIKES WORK!

By Winifred Black

Well, for goodness sake, the man wants to stay at home! He really wants to. He says so, and he means it.

There must be something wrong with that man. I don't know what it is, but there's something. I hope it isn't something too terrible for words, but I just can't keep from wondering about it.

We've had so many men at this little place, for so many months. Just a garden, and grates to clean, and a few windows to be washed, and one or two errands to run. So we thought that we might be able to get a man to come and look after things for us for his room and three good meals a day and some money. Not much money, to be sure, but the best we could do in these times. And we started looking for the man.

Oh, they were easy enough to find—the single men out of work. You stumbled over them everywhere you went.

We picked out a good sizable man, with something sort of pleasant about him, and he was tickled to death to come and "try the place" as he said.

He was all right for two or three days—and then he began to sleep late in the morning. He'd get up and have a cup of coffee, and maybe some ham and eggs at 10 o'clock, and then he'd go back to bed and sleep for hours.

Then we got a young fellow with a pale face and sort of hungry eyes. He did his work all right, but there was something sort of restless and furtive about him. And finally one day two policemen came and took him away. He was "wanted" for something, somewhere.

Then we got a middle-aged man who had seen better days. He was pretty slow, and he could spill more ashes on the rug in the living room than any human being I ever saw. But we wouldn't have minded that.

One day he stopped a guest on the front porch and told him he thought his coat needed pressing, and he could recommend exactly the man to press it for him. Also, didn't he want his car sort of rubbed up a little? And wasn't there something wrong with the engine? He thought he heard it coughing a little.

Always interested in our guests, and suggesting things his friends could do to make them look more respectable and "up-to-date" as he called it. Sort of a friendly soul, I suppose, but we weren't sorry when he went.

But we've had this new man now for three days, and you ought to see the garden! He has pulled weeds and swept paths and polished door knobs, and yesterday he asked for the vacuum, all by himself. Why, he seems to like to work! He goes around humming or whistling to himself, and we just can't make him out at all.

What do you suppose makes him that way? We're going to have a guessing contest and give prizes to the neighbor that guesses the right answer.

Now all this is the story my elderly neighbor told me this morning.

She has a comfortable house, and rather a comfortable small income. She isn't able to do garden work or to take up ashes herself, and she had almost made up her mind she and her invalid sister would have to go to an old ladies' home somewhere, to get any kind of comfort.

I wonder who is going to win the prize at that guessing contest?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

I'm Glad I'm Not a Man

Only a few years ago I wrote an article, entitled "I Wish I Were a Man," which appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine.

* * *

And I think I proved conclusively that, by nature, temperament and every mental endowment, the baby in the BLUE bassinet gets a better break for happiness than the baby in the pink bassinet. His optimism, his adventurous spirit, his sublime self-complacency, his freedom from nerves, inhibitions or an inferiority-complex. Oh, no woman living ever had such a start in life as every man gets right in the cradle!

First, I do not have to pay a woman's bills. When I have settled my OWN bills, I still have what's left of my salary check to throw away or give away as I please. There is no sweet little dictator waiting at home to spring an ermine wrap or an unpaid charge account on me. No dear little thing can run me into debt and then tearfully demand, "Well—why don't you make more money?"

* * *

I do not fear the alimony jail; being a woman, I shall never have to pay alimony to anybody. As yet, the alimony laws are more than fair to woman. But when he made them, man certainly double crossed HIMSELF!

* * *

I've never been afraid of falling in love. Most men go through life in terror of their own heart weakness. But, did you ever hear of a WOMAN being afraid that she might be "lured into marriage"—or lured OUT of it? No—a woman does her own "luring" and her own "roping." She is not afraid of nets or snares—she SETS 'em. She does not cover the path of love with ashes to avoid skidding. She LOVES to skid! Whoopee! A woman has no dread of heart balm suits.

* * *

I don't have to shave my face. It's true that I may dally with the make-up. But I don't HAVE to. Nobody would call me "a bum" if I forgot to powder my nose or lost my lipstick.

I don't have to wear PANTS! When I step out of the shower on a warm August morning, I can slip into the freeest, coolest, silkiest garments that ever could be run through a wedding ring. I don't have to dress in a dozen sections and hunt all over the house for the different gadgets that hold the masculine sartorial ensemble together. I don't have to struggle with a collar button, sleep in garments that tie around the waist and torture the solar-plexus, or worry about getting bald.

I don't have to refrain from screaming when I'm frightened or from weeping when I'm sad or mad or sorry for myself. I don't have to be "manly." And I don't have to put on a uniform and go to war!

* * *

Yes, Nature gave man a beautiful break—but he has certainly double-crossed himself. Being a woman may have its drawbacks, but it has its brighter side. I'm glad I'm not a man. (Now YOU tell one!)

Will Rogers

HSINKING, Manchukuo, Aug. 20.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

This country is so mad at Russia that they've broke off the diplomatic relations that ever existed. That makes the Soviets and Manchukuo such strangers that they can't even fight each other unless they can get Louisiana and Bolivia to act as seconds. So it looks like we're going to have peace over here all week long.

Governors Not Liked As Senate Candidates

By James T. Williams, Jr.

TRADING the office of Governor of a sovereign state for the office of Senator of the United States is forbidden by the constitution of one state and is more and more being frowned upon by the people of other states of the Union.

The Constitution of the state of Utah forbids a Governor of that state during his term of office becoming a candidate for the United States Senate. But for this ban Mr. Dern of that state would probably have stepped from the office of Governor to that of United States Senator instead of into the cabinet of President Roosevelt as Secretary of War.

Two governors seeking the Democratic nomination for United States Senator have just been defeated in the primaries of their party—Gov. White, of Ohio, and Gov. Bryan, of Nebraska.

Other factors doubtless entered into the defeat of each, but in both cases there were probably many voters who thought it unbecoming to turn the office of Governor into a senatorial candidate's political headquarters. It put the other candidates for the senatorial nomination at an unfair advantage, because they lacked in their campaign the power and prestige that the office of Governor carries.

There was a similar manifestation of popular disapproval in the State of Montana last month. In the Democratic primaries for United States Senators the voters of his party refused to nominate Senator Erickson for the seat in the Senate which he now holds on appointment of the Governor. Apparently the people of Montana resented the trading in two of their highest offices, which they believe took place at the time Senator Walsh of Montana resigned to accept President Roosevelt's appointment as Attorney General and died on the eve of the inauguration.

Trading of Offices Not Normal Method

GOV. ERICKSON resigned his office. The Lieutenant Governor succeeded to the governorship and then appointed his predecessor to the seat in the Senate vacated by the resignation of Senator Walsh.

This sort of trading in the offices of the people may be technically within the terms of the Federal Constitution but it is not the normal method provided by that organic law for filling either the office of Governor or the office of United States Senator.

Where Governors White and Bryan failed in their attempt to use the office of Governor as a stepping stone to the Senate, other governors in earlier years have succeeded. For example, Senator Robinson of Arkansas resigned from the Sixty-second Congress on January 24, 1913, was inaugurated Governor of Arkansas January 14 having been elected to that office in the preceding September and on January 24 was elected to fill a vacancy in the United States Senate.

Senator Russell of Georgia enjoyed a tremendous advantage over Congressman Crisp from the day their primary contest for the United States Senate started, owing to the fact that as governor, Mr. Russell had at his disposal the power and prestige of that office and the support of the state organization. This was probably the decisive factor in Senator Russell's victory.

Contrary to Theory Of Government

GOV. KEYES of New Hampshire, was elected to the Senate while in the office of Governor, and there have been many other cases of the same sort. But the more the people see the office of Governor used as a stepping stone to the Senate the less they like it. It defeats the fair contest which the primary was devised to provide. It is contrary to the whole theory of American government.

After an American citizen has been elected Governor of a sovereign state he is supposed to be the Governor of all the people of the state and to administer that great office solely in the public interest.

No Governor can do that who is at the same time conducting a campaign to nominate himself as the candidate of his party for United States Senator.

It is as impossible to be an impartial Governor while running for the United States Senate as it is to be an efficient Postmaster General while holding the political offices of the national committee and chairman of a state committee of the party in power.

What the people of Utah have forbidden by means of a provision in their state constitution the people of Montana, Ohio and Nebraska have condemned by their votes at the polls at recent primaries—using the power of the office of Governor to obtain a seat in the United States Senate.

The Story of the Cardiff Giant, One of the Greatest Hoaxes Ever Perpetrated on the Public

By Edwin C. Hill

THE Cardiff Giant is with us again, making a "comeback" after a rest of a quarter of a century, during which time he reposed in the dark and the dust of a warehouse in Fort Dodge, Ia. They have taken him out on a tour of the state and county fairs of the Middle West where the farmers and their wives, for the usual nominal fee, can gaze upon him and forget the drought. Here follows the history of "The Cardiff Giant—The American Goliath—A Wonderful Geological Discovery:."

On October 16, 1869, William C. Newell, a farmer of Cardiff, N. Y., 15 miles south of Syracuse and near a reservation of Onondaga Indians, was digging a well with two helpers. About three feet below the surface, they struck what they first took to be the skeletons of Indians. However, further excavation revealed a figure, buried upright, which measured 10 feet 7 inches high, 3 feet across the shoulders and weighed 3,000 pounds.

The discovery astounded the country. Five hundred persons a day rushed from all parts of the United States to look upon it. Newell took in $28 an hour the first day, and the railroads stopped their trains to give the passengers an opportunity to see the wonder of the day.

Thought to Be Body Of a Prophet

AND everyone who gazed had his own explanation of what it was. The state agent for the Indians offered this theory:

"The Onondagas believe the statue is the petrified body of a gigantic Indian prophet, who flourished centuries ago and who said that he would be seen again."

The excavators insisted that it was a petrified man, and to back their claims pointed to the twisted posture of the limbs and the pores in the skin. For a short time the geologists were a bit puzzled, but within a week Dr. John F. Boynton announced that the thing was a statue "cut from a piece of stratified sulphate of lime and c[illegible]ried probably somewhere in [illegible]country from our gypsum be[illegible].

Prof. D. C. [illegible]h, of Yale, followed this up wi[illegible]he suggestion that the Cardiff G[illegible] had been but recently put in h[illegible] grave because gypsum is soluble in water and if "he" had been buried any length of time "he" would have disintegrated. However, as usual, it was years before the truth caught up with the lie. Newell refused an offer of $20,000 for a quarter interest in the statue and, with his partners, one of whom was David Harum, the character in the flesh of Westcott's novel, exhibited it throughout the land.

While the country marveled or scoffed, one man bit his finger nails in chagrin. He was Phineas T. Barnum, the master showman of all time, who in this instance had been out-Barnumed by a group of yokels. He offered to buy it and, when refused, had a 12-foot giant carved for himself and exhibited it in his shows as the original.

The records have it that six million persons paid good money to see William Newell's discovery, which, in reality, was a block of gypsum, quarried near Fort Dodge, sculptured by a Chicago stonecutter, taken to Binghamton by train and then carted by night to Cardiff to be buried in the spot where a well was to be sunk. The giant continued to make money for 40 years before becoming a back number, and fetched only $200 in 1912 when sold for storage fees by a Boston warehouse.

Now the promoters believe him ready for a Patti performance, and if it should be what Broadway inelegantly calls a "flop," why, there is the offer of the Syracuse Chamber of Commerce to make him a permanent monument in that city. Certainly the Cardiff Giant should be preserved for the ages as the prime example of the gullibility of the masses.

The 'Gloomy Dean' About to Retire

A PICTURESQUE figure passes from the world stage with the imminent retirement of the Rev. William Inge, the "Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. An outspoken liberal—almost a radical—he is most celebrated for his sombre and salty discourses on the affairs of our times. Only his intimate friends know what a misnomer is the title "Gloomy" when applied to him. They have a knowledge of the sharpness and the brightness of hs wit.

Dean Inge is 74 now and has had the two years more living which he asked for on his seventy-second birthday. As a scholar, churchman and writer he has been quoted periodically on many and varied subjects, ranging from the evils of lipstick to the belief that England has passed its peak as a world power. But there is one interview he gave which I will hold always as a classic. A reporter asked him what he counted the best things in life, and he replied:

The aged Dean pointed to the picture of a little girl on the wall of his study.

"That's my child," he said simply. "She died when she was 11. Hers was as perfect a life as I have ever known. Only God knows when we have lived our lives. It is He who must try to make our term adequate."

Wise Words

Zeal without knowledge is the sister of folly.

Your looking glass will tell you what none of your friends will.

Young men may die, old men must.

You must ask your neighbor if you shall live in peace.

You cannot take a cow from a man who has none.
